Lebanon Fears Israeli Reprisals

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Arab guerrillas fired a barrage of rocks Saturday into an Israeli paramilitary settlement in the Jordan Valley. Fears mounted in Beirut of an Israeli reprisal attack for Friday's schoolbus ambush amid reports Israeli troops were building up along the Lebanese border.

An Israeli military spokesman said Israel's 50-mile frontier with Lebanon was quiet Friday night and early Saturday. But later Saturday morning Arab guerrillas unleashed a barrage with Soviet-made Katyusha rockets on the Isreali settlement of Nahal Meshura, he said. Little damage was reported.

In the Lebanese capital of Beirut, informed political sources said Lebanon's Army was taking all necessary precautions against any Israeli attack in reprisal for the bazooka attack by Arab guerrillas on an Israeli schoolbus Friday and killed 12 persons, eight of them children, and wounded 21. The Beirut sources said Lebanese military commanders were studying the situation "in the light of reports that Israeli troops are building up opposite the central sector of the southern Lebanese border."

According to the sources, Israeli troops were concentrated opposite the villages of Maisa El-Jabal, Blida, Aitaroun, Bint Jbeil, Yaroun, Ramish and Eita El-Chaab. These villages curve in a 16-mile arc along Lebanon's southern border with Israel near a point where the frontier turns sharply north.

Four of the villages—Blida, Aitaroun, Yaroun and Bint Jbeil—were targets Friday of a five-hour Israeli artillery bombardment, Lebanese military spokesman said. Official Lebanese sources said the toll in the bombardment was 20 dead and more than 40 injured.

Lebanese President Charles Helou spent all Saturday morning in a series of conferences with his cabinet ministers and senior officials.

Israelis mourned the death of the bus attack Saturday after their leaders in emotion-choked speeches vowed reprisals against Arab guerrillas based in Lebanon.

Pope Paul VI, in a note to Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban, expressed deep regret Saturday over the schoolbus attack.

In the note delivered by the Apostolic Delegate in Jerusalem, the pontiff asked that his feeling be conveyed to the government and to the bereaved families. The Pope's note also condemned all acts of violence which affect innocent citizens, Israeli Ministry sources said.

In Beirut the Arab guerrilla organization that claimed credit for the attack and said the object of the ambush was a bus carrying "zionist experts" in northern Israel, issued a second statement Saturday.

The new statement by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine's general command said the attack was on a school bus in revenge for an Israeli air raid that hit an Egyptian school, killing 46 children, last April.

NIXON PRESSING SEASHORE FUNDS

Congress Asked For $26.9 Million More To Speed Up Acquisition Of Ranchlands

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — The Nixon Administration, possibly concerned about spiraling land costs in the Point Reyes National Seashore, has asked Congress to spend an additional $26.9 million for acquisition during the next 13 months in a move to complete the purchase more quickly.

The additional funds could raise to $36.5 million the amount the Interior Department would be in a position to spend during that period.

Congress authorized creation of the seashore in 1962 and set a $19 million ceiling for land purchase. Earlier this year the administration approved an additional $38 million, jacking the maximum figure up to $57 million to meet rising real estate prices.

Originally, the administration planned to spread the appropriation over the next 25 months. But recent land sales in the seashore apparently are a factor in the speedup.

The $26.9 million request will be added to the $7.1 supplemental spending measure already approved by the house, Stan W. Hulett, legislative assistant to Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District, said yesterday.

Hulett was unsure whether the $26.9 million includes another $2.5 million out of the $38 million approved Tuesday by the House.

The request for the additional $26.9 million is expected to be tacked onto the Department of the Interior budget measure when it is considered in the Senate.

Further land speculation in the area may be behind the move. Half the land for the seashore remains to be purchased and Marin County is powerless under state law to prevent the property from being subdivided and sold at a higher price.

This was shown recently when the Lake Ranch inside the seashore was subdivided and the parcels sold for seven times the value set by the Marin County assessor.

National Park Service officials have informed Congress the sum should be sufficient to purchase the remaining properties needed to complete the project.

Jackson State Students Surrender Riddled Walls

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI)— Assistant U. S. Attorney General Jerris Leonard rushed to the Jackson State College campus before dawn today and persuaded students to let the state remove bullet-riddled glass panels from a girls' dormitory.

About 150 youths, mostly black, stepped aside and watched the work crew take away the panels, doors and windows bearing the marks of state police gunfire that killed two Negroes during a rock-throwing demonstration last week.

"The evidence will be marked and placed in cardboard boxes under the supervision of Justice Department officials," promised Leonard, chief of the department's Civil Rights Division.

Warner Buxton, president of the Jackson State student body, told the group: "We had only one purpose and that was to prevent the destruction of this monument. We are not here to cause further bloodshed or to fight the Army because we are outnumbered."

National Guardsmen have been on duty since the violence last week, but there was no sign of the soldiers or state troopers this morning.

The panels, including some metal ones, apparently will be used in local and federal investigations of the killings. Leonard was assigned by Attorney General John W. Mitchell to take charge of the federal probe.

Some 250 students, accusing the state of trying to destroy evidence, prevented workmen from removing the panels earlier in the week and small groups had held around-the-clock vigils at the dormitory since then.

Airport Cocaine Haul Said Worth $250,000

Five Marin County residents were arrested and two pounds of cocaine worth $250,000 on the drug market seized last night at the San Francisco Airport after a federal undercover agent purchased the narcotic for $22,000.

Federal, state and Marin drug abuse agents combined in the arrest and seizure, culminating more than a month of investigation.

In addition to the five persons arrested at the airport, two Sausalito men were arrested later in the evening at their home in connection with the investigation.

Arrested at the airport and being held without bail in San Francisco County Jail for investigation of unspecified federal drug charges were:

Sharon Ann Needleman, 26, of 18 Crest Road, San Anselmo; Maureen Booth, 23, of 54 Bulkley Drive, Sausalito; Marcia Marie Freet, 27, of 107 Marion

Reds Held In Viet Pincers?

SAIGON (AP) — About 10,000 South Vietnamese troops and hundreds of tanks and armored vehicles launched an attack into Indochina's biggest rubber plantation in Cambodia Saturday in an effort to destroy an enemy regiment.

One task force rumbled north up Highway 15 toward the Chub plantation in eastern Cambodia while a second force pushed in from the east along Highway 7.

A dozen Khmer Rouge-Cambodian Communist guerrillas — were reported killed on the plantation's southern edge and 15 were reported captured. Another 25 enemy were slain east of the 70-square-mile plantation.

South Vietnamese fighter-bombers, flying in support, knocked out eight antiaircraft guns, officers said.

Field reports said two South Vietnamese soldiers were killed and 11 wounded.

The plantation lies east of Kompong Cham, Cambodia's third largest city, 35 miles from the South Vietnamese border and 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital.

"This is a hunting game between my forces and the Communists," said Lt. Gen. Do Cao Tri, commander of the South Vietnamese troops. "If the Communists stand and fight we will destroy them."

Tri flew into Kompong Cham last Monday to promise more combat support for the Cambodians if they took the offensive against the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong.

Farther north in Cambodia, a South Vietnamese force reported its first sharp fighting in an operation launched three days ago west of the Duc Lap Special Forces camp in Vietnam's southern central highlands. Reports said 20 North Vietnamese and seven government troops were killed in the clash, about six miles inside Cambodia.

U.S. forces operating across the frontier south of this operation reported another day of light action and the capture of more enemy rice caches. One cache contained 30 tons.

The start of monsoon rains over the Ho Chi Minh trail from North Vietnam through eastern Laos were said to be further complicating the enemy's supply problems.

In Phnom Penh, the Cambodian military command said the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese are apparently "aban-

Augusta Watches 8,000 Marchers Follow Mules, Empty Coffins

ATLANTA (UPI)—At least 8,000 persons walked through Atlanta behind a mule-drawn wagon Saturday to protest against "repression of dissent" in a march reminiscent of the funeral of Dr. Martin Luther King.

Temperatures in the 90s beat down on the march as it crept down the mile-long route from King's tomb to Morehouse College.

Leading the march was a creaking wagon, drawn by a mule and a horse and driven by an elderly, bearded black man. Behind it came two empty caskets, draped with black cloth and borne by 10 men. The caskets symbolized slain student dissenters and black rioters.

Behind the caskets, in the first line of the march, walked King's widow, Coretta, Sen. George D. McGovern, D-S. D., King's successor, the Rev. Ralph Abernathy; Atlanta Mayor Sam Massell and Leonard Woodcock, new United Auto Workers president, here to make his first public speech as Walter Reuther's successor.

Police officials estimated 8,000 were in the march when it began.

About 700 of the demonstra-

Senator To Plead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Sen. Daniel B. Brewster, D-Md., will plead innocent at his arraignment in U.S. District Court Monday on charges he accepted a $24,500 bribe, one of his attorneys said Friday.

Brewster, 46, who has been sick and out of the country, returned to the United States recently and "is competent to prepare for trail and to stand trial," lawyer Norman P. Ramsey of Baltimore said in a letter to the court.

Brewster has been indicted on five counts charging him with accepting a bribe from Speigel Inc., a Chicago mail order firm, to influence his vote on "junk mail" legislation.

Bank Fights Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of a union-owned bank that pioneered low interest loans for poor people testified Friday in opposition to the House-passed one-bank holding company bill.

Maxwell Brandwen, president of the Amalgamated Bank of New York, told the Senate Banking Committee the bill would eliminate an exemption granted labor organizations in the present law regulating bank holding companies.

Brandwen said his bank, controlled by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, charges no more for personal loans "than General Motors has to pay when it borrows from Chase or First National City Bank."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lt. Gen. Albert P. Clark, a military aviator since 1937 and a fighter pilot over Europe in World War II, has been nominated by President Nixon to become superintendent of the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Clark, 56, who went to high school in San Antonio, Tex., and was graduated from West Point in 1936, has served as commander of the air university since 1968.

Mamie Disappointed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mamie Eisenhower, whose grandson, David, skipped his graduation from Amherst to spare his family any embarrassment by possible antiwar demonstrators, has confessed her disappointment in missing the ceremony.

At the White House for Mrs. Nixon's annual luncheon for wives of Senators and top-ranking administration officials, Mrs. Eisenhower was asked how she felt about not seeing David graduate.

"I think after four years in school. . .I think it's rather disappointing," she said, tears welling in her bright blue eyes. "It would be for anyone. But there are so many in the same boat."

David and his wife, Julie, President Nixon's daughter, decided not to attend their graduation ceremonies when student unrest disrupted classes following Nixon's decision to use troops in Cambodia.

Swedes Aid Hanoi

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The Swedish Red Cross said today it will send condensed milk, children's clothing and laboratory equipment to the University of Hanoi as a first step in its $7 million North Vietnamese aid program.

Trouble In Cyprus

LIMOSSOL, Cyprus (AP) — Cyprus President Archbishop Makarios made an appearance at the Limossol police headquarters in South Cyprus today and angrily dismissed several police officers present when a raiding force of rightists captured the posts weapons supply Friday night.

The police headquarters was raided by more than 70 armed men who left leaflets identifying them as members of the terrorist National Front, which favors union of Cyprus with Greece.

The raiders, who made no attempt to conceal their identities with masks or disguises, surrounded the headquarters, overpowered the guards on duty and herded them and off-duty policemen into cells.

Then, police said, they knocked down a wall of the police armory and made off with 56 sub-machine guns, several heavy machine guns, 76 rifles and thousands of rounds of ammunition.

Motorists will be banned from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. around Boston Common, the Public Gardens, and much of the shopping and financial district.

Mayor Kevin H. White said about 2,000 volunteers are expected to help city crews pick up trash, repaint crosswalks and lane guides, and install hundreds of new traffic and street signs.

It won't be all work, however. Several groups, including the cast of "Hair," will be on hand to entertain the workers.

Heart Swap Suit

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — A $1 million civil suit charged Friday that a heart transplant team at the Medical College of Virginia used a "systematic scheme" to transplant a heart, terminating the donor's life.

The suit was filed in Law and Equity Court by state Sen. Lawrence D. Wilder, on behalf of the administrator of the donor's estate. Wilder is the first Negro state senator of this century in Virginia.

The donor, Bruce O. Tucker, a 58-year-old Richmond Negro laborer, was admitted to MCV May 24, 1968, suffering from head injuries.

The suit alleges that the persons it names "embarked upon a systematic scheme to transplant his heart into the body of Joseph G. Klett of Orange. When they did this, they terminated Tucker's life."

Klett, 54, was Virginia's first heart transplant recipient, and the 16th in the world. Klett, a white man died on June 1, 1968, six days after the operation. Doctors attributed the death to "failure of the transplant."

TV Show Wins

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The educational television program "Sesame Street" has been approved for showing by the Mississippi Authority for Educational Television.

The highly rated program, excluded earlier from showing in Mississippi because it has a racially integrated cast, was approved at the board's regular monthly meeting, the board announced Friday.

The board rejected the show last month, reportedly because a majority of its five members feared the integrated cast would endanger the future of the newly funded ETV network. The network now operates only the Jackson station, but the legislature recently appropriated funds to expand the system statewide.

Jane Fonda Bounced

FT. MEADE, Md. (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda and author Mark Lane led a troupe of antiwar protesters to another military post Friday and received the usual reception from Army authorities.

They and 12 others were escorted from this post by military policemen after they had gathered in front of the main post exchange and passed out antiwar literature.

Miss Fonda and Lane, author of "Rush To Judgement," which questioned the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy, earlier spoke to 1,000 students at the nearby University of Maryland.

Lane told that rally in College Park he thought Vice President Spiro T. Agnew should be indicted for allegedly crossing state lines to incite disorders.

Agnew Proves Nixon Hasn't Muzzled Him

HOUSTON (UPI)—Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Friday night President Nixon had not "muzzled" him. Then he proved it.

Agnew verbally blasted the news media, rioting students and the faculty he said supports them, and "the isolationists in the Senate."

"I have an obligation to all of the people of the United States to call things as I see them, and I have an obligation to the President to support his actions in the best manner that I can," he said. "I choose my own words, and I set the tone of my speeches. And I intend to be heard above the din even if it means raising my voice."

PICKETS MARCH

Outside the hotel 150 persons quietly picketed in protest against Agnew and the Nixon administration.

Agnew did not restrict his attack on the news media to the "Eastern intellectuals." He cited specific examples of "liberal news media in this country" and two of them were from the South—the Atlanta Constitution and the Arkansas Gazette. Agnew also cited newspaper columnists and cartoonists.

He singled for attack the Washington Post and its two-time Pulitzer Prize winning cartoonist Herblock, The New York Times and its writers Anthony Lewis, Tom Wicker and James Reston, the New Republic, I.F. Stone's biweekly, Life magazine and its "expert on the presidency—or I should say it's leading expert, Hugh Sidney," and the New York Post and its writers Pete Hamill and Harriet Van Horne.

He said until these newsmen "cool it," he won't either.

'MY RHETORIC'

"I can assure you that some of these pundits make my rhetoric seem tame," he said at a $500-a-plate fund raising dinner. "There are people who never tire of telling a President how he should run the nation's affairs. I hope you will overlook the slightly hysterical tone of some of their comments."

Washington Post following Nixon's decision "to clean out the enemy sanctuaries in Cambodia."

"The Post may as well have come right out and said it thought the President had lost his sanity," Agnew said. "Words like 'erratic, irrational, incomprehensible' are not ordinarily used to describe a carefully studied military decision by the nation's commander-in-chief."

'SICK MASTER'

He called Herblock "that sick master of invective" and said he "reached a new low" in a cartoon depitcting the Kent State shootings.

He said Reston of the New York Times compared him to Jerry Rubin, one of the Chicago Seven.

"To suggest that I am guilty of this type of incendiarism is in keeping with the irresponsibility that The Times manages to achieve on its editorial page," Agnew said. "And it is appropriate that the slur be made by Mr. Reston, who delights in calling other people demagogues." Reston is a vice president and columnist for The Times and a two-time Pulitzer Prize winner.

"But for pure unbridled invective, you will have to look far to beat that excitable columnist, television commentator and former ambassador to Finland, Carl T. Rowan," Agnew said. "Mr. Rowan might once have used diplomatic language, but he long ago lost the art and his rhetoric is anything but cool."

ON STUDENTS

On militant students and faculty Agnew said:

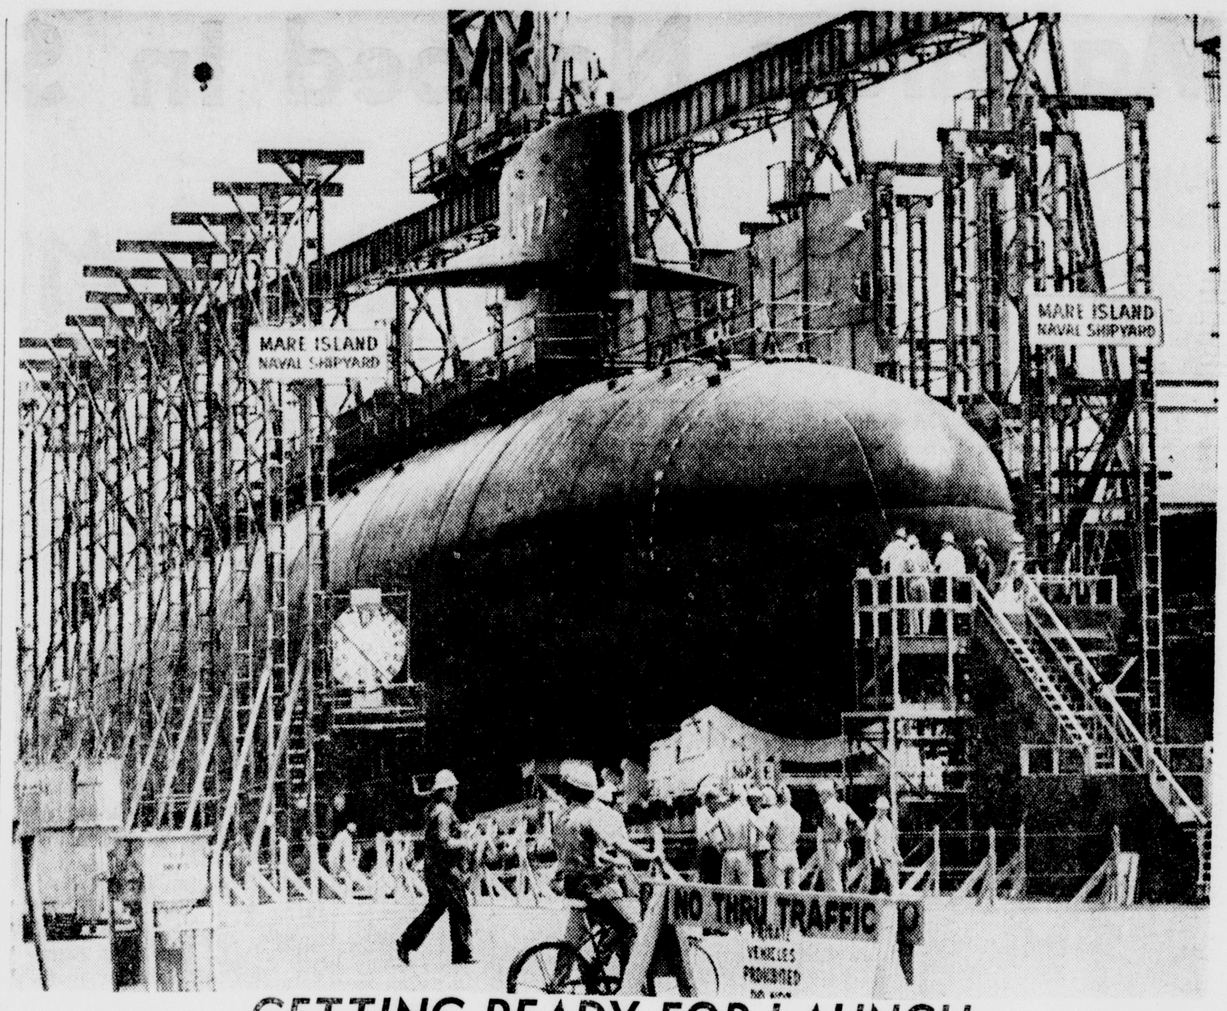

"It is my honest opinion that this hard core of faculty and students should be identified and dismissed from the otherwise healthy body of the college community lest they, like a cancer, destroy it."

He said the "isolationists in the Senate" are trying "at every turn ot thwart the President's efforts to conclude this country's involvment in Vietnam."

"The President desperately needs a Republican Congress to replace these neo-isolationist views and remove the willful obstruction of his programs."

News Media Advised To Ignore Cross Fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The press has come "under some pretty withering cross fire" from political leaders and the radical left alike, but it "should not have time to waste in whining about it," according to Mrs. Katherine Graham, publisher of the Washington Post and Newsweek.

Mrs. Graham said the press, instead, should protect its "ability to collect the news, because that is where the public interest lies."

"Our political leaders may regard us as pernicious enemies, but the radical left no less passionately regards us as sycophants and tools of our political leaders," she said Friday. "The flak will keep coming at us from both sides, and we should not have time to waste in whining about it."

Mrs. Graham and former CBS News president Fred W. Friendly replied to attacks on the press in speeches before the American Jewish Congress biennial convention.

Their remarks were made before Vice President Spiro T. Agnew delivered an address before a Republican group in Houston, Tex. attacking what he called "the liberal news media of this country." His comments were highly critical of the Post among other papers.

Friendly, presently the Ford Foundation's adviser on television, said American journalism had become "so busy defending its honor against attack from all sides" that it was allowing its critics to decide what news to cover.

"The journalist fails when he allows himself to be diverted by the tactics of a skilled sleight-of-hand artist like Vice President Spiro Agnew," said Friendly.

He said the press "is permitting people other than the producer and the editor—whether it be the Vice President or the street protestors, the public relations men or the construction workers—to divert us by setting the agenda for the stories we are covering."

Friendly added that as a result "the truly great ground swells which shape our times seem to escape our field of vision, remaining slightly out of focus until it is too late to do something about it—in My Lai, Kent State or Augusta."

Schoolchildren Watch As Fireman Falls To Death

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A 34-year-old firemen fell 40 feet to his death from an aerial ladder Friday while demonstrating fire fighting equipment before 200 elementary school children.

"A tragic circumstance developed," said Clarence Rosenstock, assistant fire chief, in describing the death of Robert L. Hutchinson.

"Apparently, just as the ground operator working the cable suspected a malfunction in the ladder and stopped it suddenly, Hutchinson was adjusting his safety belt.

"The ladder began to whip back and forth and Hutchinson fell."

Hutchinson, of Pacifica, was married and the father of two small daughters and a son. He was commended for extraordinary heroism in 1963 for rescuing a mother and daughter trapped in a fire.

The demonstration in which he lost his life was part of a community relations program initiated by the fire department to acquaint school children with the various types of equipment used.

Mayor Joseph L. Alioto ordered all city flags flown at half-staff for the dead fireman, who was the 110th San Francisco fire fighter to lose his life in the line of duty since 1879.

Auto Union's New Chief In March

DETROIT (UPI) — Leonard Woodcock flew to Georgia to join a civil rights march today after succeeding Walter P. Reuther as head of the United Auto Workers and pledging to continue the UAW's activist role in seeking social justice.

"Walter would have been in Atlanta," Woodcock, 59, said, hours after his selection as president Friday. He said he would join the last leg of a "march against oppression" as a "signal to the world" that the 1.8-million-member union will not waver from its social aims.

On the way, he stopped at the General Motors Corp., stockholders' meeting to vote the UAW's seven GM shares in favor of "Campaign GM" proposals to make the giant corporation more responsive to the demands of consumer groups.

Woodcock borrowed from Reuther's phrases in a news conference following his expected selection to head the union. He said, "We are determined to win a contract that will give every equity to our workers—a contract Walter Reuther would be proud of."

He used two of Reuther's favorite phrases—"We will get our equity," and, "The industry has got to remember that wages don't push up prices. Prices push up wages."

Livermore Backs Peripheral Canal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The state's resources chief has come to the defense of the controversial Peripheral Canal, designed to move water from the San Francisco Bay-Delta to Southern California.

The project would not harm the ecology of the Delta, as some critics have claimed, said Norman B. Livermore Jr., California secretary of resources.

Instead, he told the Commonwealth Club Friday, the situation is the other way around.

"The ecology of the Delta will be irreparably harmed if the Peripheral Canal is not built," he declared, repeating claims of a recent Water Resources Department report.

The report said that although the canal would cut the water flow in the Delta by 60 per cent, it would improve the overall environment by diverting part of the remaining water for release in what are now stagnant dead-end channels.

Livermore criticized recent testimony by professors and engineers before the Bay Conservation Development Commission that diversion of fresh water out of the Bay Area would cause a salt water build-up and harm plant and fish life in the bay.

"This is most definitely not true," he said.

"I am sure many will agree with me that if there is any clearcut case of environmental destruction by a water project, it would be attributed to San Francisco as a result of the city's action in drawing its water supply from distant mountains and destroying Hetch Hetchy Valley, termed by many who say it equal of Yosemite in beauty."

Livermore said there is a growing problem in finding the money needed to preserve the environment which the populace is becoming so increasingly concerned about today.

He suggested "more tax sharing from the federal government" or a reduction in funds going to health, education and welfare.

The latter would be preferred by taxpayers, he said.

He suggested that conservationists use more moderate language. "They should minimize vituperative antibusiness statements," he said.

"In pricing and evaluating our environmental decisions, we need men of good will on both sides of the economic-esthetic fence," he said.

"Rather than name-shouting and vituperation, we need more constructive meetings, productive dialogue, active implementation."

French Atom Test

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — France exploded the second nuclear device of its current test series Friday with British and American ships observing the blast and U.S. planes testing the mushroom cloud.

American planes from Pago Pago in American Samoa flew into the nuclear mushroom cloud after giving Tahiti their flight plan according to international rules.

The U.S. aircraft were believed using the French nuclear tests to test their atmospheric observation equipment. Military sources said the French nuclear command received weather data from both British and American ships nearby.

Rafferty And Board Sued Over Texts

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A suit charging state Superintendent of Public Instruction Max Rafferty and the state Board of Education with illegally adopting a series of reading books was filed Friday in superior court.

The action, filed by the curriculum council of the California Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, asks the court to overturn the adoption of the controversial series of readers published by J. B. Lippincott Co. for kindergarten through third grade classes. It contended the board adopted the texts two years ago upon the recommendation of Rafferty but failed to display them for the full 60-day period in 50 public libraries prior to adoption as required by state law.

Federation Vice President Miles Myers said the suit is designed to insure that the board adheres to the law prior to its expected adoption of social science books later this year.

The curriculum commission and Rafferty are in dispute over the texts under consideration. Rafferty favors books published by Allyn & Bacon Publishing Co. But Commission Chairman Vernon Hinze has called the Bacon books racist.

Myers said adoption of the Lippincott books "is a symptom of a dangerous trend toward one-man rule on textbook adoption for California's four million children in kindergarten through the eighth grade."

Most Campus Disturbances Subsiding

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Riot police and National Guardsmen were needed to quell disturbances or maintain operations at a few college campuses Friday. Most schools were quiet.

Estimates began to mount of property damage done since President Nixon announced U.S. military involvement in Cambodia.

Riot-equipped police swept through a crowd of students blocking a busy highway near the Fresno (Calif.) State College campus. About 40 persons were arrested.

The sit-down group, a fraction of some 300 protesters who had surged in and out of campus buildings earlier shouting "strike," had piled garbage and other debris on the highway before they began their sit-in. Police were pelted with rocks and bottles as they moved to break up the demonstration.

The Fresno students were protesting the school's alleged mistreatment of blacks and Mexican-Americans. Earlier this week students shattered windows in campus buildings with pipes and clubs and a firebomb destroyed the college's new $1 million computer.

About 300 National Guardsmen, with 4,700 more camped nearby, kept watch over the Ohio State University campus at Columbus Friday. City safety director John Hughes Jr. said the disorders which hit the campus Thursday were sparked by black militants who were not students.

Ohio State operated on a normal schedule and officials said they would try to keep it open.

Five hundred guardsmen were ordered Friday to spend their two-week summer camp at Greenbelt, Md., a short drive from the University of Maryland campus where troops have moved in twice in two weeks to quell disorders. Spokesmen said the guard usually trains in New York.

Firebomb attacks were made on the ROTC building on the Oregon State University campus and the National Guards Armory in Corvallis, where the university is located. Damage was minor but the state arson squad was called in.

Novato School Budget Draft Set For Study

A preliminary draft of the fiscal 1970-71 budget will be studied by Novato Unified School District trustees at an adjourned meeting at 8 p.m. Monday in the administration building.

The budget does not include at this time money which the district will receive from the state and federal government, according to Supt. James G. Bunker.

Other items to come before the board include hiring four teachers for summer school and naming principals at Hill Junior High School and the adult evening high school.

Novatans Study Past Failures To Attract

The failure of past city councils to establish consistent planning policies has kept Novato from attracting needed light industry, several Novato residents said today during a public forum on Novato's problems.

The "self analysis" of Novato — known as the Congress for Community Progress — was sponsored by the Novato Chamber of Commerce at Novato High School and was attended by approximately 180 persons.

During a panel discussion of the city's business and industry problems, residents said that the city councils have not maintained a cinsistent planning philosophy that would lure the industry.

They charged the councils with "flip-flopping" from otne policy to another.

"Every time one council indicates to industry it is welcome, then another council is elected and changes the policies," one resident told the panel.

In addition to the panel on business and industry, there were also panels on youth, civic pride and beautification, education, human relations, recreation and roads and transportation.

The day-lond study was opened with a slide program by Pacific Gas and Electric Co. which spotlighted both the merits and faults of the city. The panel discussions were to be followed this afternnon by a general discussion and formulation of recommendations to improve certain aspects of the city. These recommendations will be passed first to the Chamber of Commerce and then on to appropriate governmental agencies, including the city council and the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

Novato Boys' Club Opens Funds Drive

The Novato Boys' Club fund campaign headquarters was opened yesterday at 910 Grant Avenue and former councilman Babe Silva was named campaign director.

Although the Boys' Club of Novato was formed four years ago, it has been inactive until present officers decided to get the club going.

Gilbert E. Messa, executive director of the Petaluma Boys' Club, attended the opening to offer his help in starting a campaign similar to one in Petaluma.

Reg Carolan of Novato, a member of the Kansas City Chief's professional football team, has been named honorary fund chairman.

No fund goal has been set for the campaign. The club has taken a six month lease-purchase option on a site on Reichert and Railroad avenues for a clubhouse.

Alfred W. Bowman has donated use of the building at 910 Grant Avenue for drive headquarters.

Mobile Home Permit Denied

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — The Sonoma County Planning Commission has denied a Petaluma rezoning request to permit a mobile home.

A. Quackenbush had requested rezoning at 6560 Bodega Avenue, Petaluma, to permit the mobile home. The commission said Thursday it felt the mobile home would not blend with the surrounding area.

The rezoning request will be the subject of another public hearing before the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors.

Marijuana Fine

Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court yesterday placed Aloysius John Koehler, 18, of Penngrove, on probation for two years and fined him $100 for possessing marijuana on April 5 in Novato.

To Juvenile Court

The case of Michael Richards, 18, of Larkspur, yesterday was transferred to Marin Juvenile Court. He is accused of possessing marijuana on April 24.

King Students Collecting Cans

Jack Simmons, a science teacher at the school, said they hope to raise $100 by collecting a half ton of cans by June 15.

The Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp. is paying $200 a ton for the cans.

Persons interested in donating cans can leave them in Room 12 at the school, or telephone Simmons at the school to arrange for a pickup.

Misdemeanor Verdict In Injury Collision

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court yesterday placed Mary Louise Dorr, 42, of San Mateo, on one year of probation and fined her $400 for a drunken driving ofefnse. He also declared the crime to be a misdemeanor.

Miss Dorr, an Army sergeant, had been convicted by a jury in March of felony drunken driving. The charge stemmed from an accident on Highway 101 Oct. 14 in which six persons were injured.

Sentence Date Set On Marijuana Count

Sentencing has been set for July 3 in Marin Municipal Court for Richard Dale Pitts, 20, of San Francisco, who has pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of possessing marijuana.

Pitts was arrested Feb. 20 by deputies on Shoreline Highway who stopped him for a traffic violation and said he had a small amount of marijuana in his coat pocket.

Federal Debt Plea Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration, facing heavier-than-expected needs for financing next year, has decided to ask Congress for an increase of about $16 billion in the national debt ceiling.

The plans, confirmed by sources in Congress and the Treasury Department, would bring the ceiling to a record $393 billion. Treasury officials insist the increase is necessary to keep the public debt under the legal ceiling, now $377 billion.

As of Friday afternoon, Treasury officials said they planned to ask for an increase of between $13 billion and $16 billion, and one said, "I won't rule out anything even above that."

Treasury Secretary David M. Kennedy and Budget Bureau Director Robert P. Mayo will go before the House Ways and Means Committee Monday to submit the administration's proposal.

Planner Opposes Segregation Of Developments

A University of California professor told a Marin conservationists' conference today that the present approach to community planning is piecemeal and there is no need to segregrate various forms of development.

"There is no reason why industry has to be shoved off in one little corner, recreation areas in another," Robert Twiss, associate professor of natural resources planning on the Berkeley campus, said.

"We have to realize, for instance, that much industry can be very educational, and so should be made an integral part of the community."

Twiss, speaking before a group of about 80 persons at a Marin Civic Center conference sponsored by the Marin Planning Group of the Sierra Club's Bay Chapter, outlined a 10-point program for environmental planning and control.

His program includes: inventory by the county of its land resources, a survey of what people would use the land for and setting of specific standards for environmental quality.

School Aides Deny Antiwar Fliers Link

Officials of two school districts whose students have been distributing antiwar leaflets and material promoting a candidate for Congress said yesterday none of the material was produced at the schools or with school equipment -- to the best of their knowledge.

Some citizens had raised the question whether material being handed out by students of Marin Junior College and Tamalpais High School District schools had been produced at the schools themselves, with tax money. The material included petitions against and attacks on the Vietnam War and its expansion to Cambodia, as well as leaflets urging votes for George Brown, a Los Angeles congreeman who is a candidate for the Deomocratic nomination for U.S. Senate.

John P. Grasham, superintendent of Marin Junior College District, said, "As far as we know, most or all of that material was produced at the Newman Center," which is across College Avenue from College of Marin and next door to the George Brown for Senate headquarters.

Grasham said, however, that it was posible some materials purchased by the Associated Students of College of Marin were used. He noted that the Peace Coalition, which also has headquarters next to the Newman Center, has been recognized by the Associated Students.

Edward J. Neumeier, administrative assistant in Tamalpais High School District, said principals of all three of the district's schools had warned teachers against any use of school equipment to produce political material.

Neuemier said Principal Raymond J. Bell of Tamalpais High School had been asked by the Mill Valley Peace Coalition for use of a school mimeograph, but had told the group it would have to file a request for such use under the "civic center" provisions of the Education Code. No such request had been filed, he said.

Jack R. Baat, assistant principal of Redwood High School, said that if any of the antiwar materials distributed by Redwood students had been prepared at the school, "it's been done by sleight-of-hand."

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney noted that any use of school equipment or materials to produce any kind of political material is contrary to law.

Warner Ridge Hearing Monday

A large crowd is assured when the Mill Valley Planning Commission holds a continued public hearing on a proposed 128-unit housing development on Warner Ridge Monday at 8 p.m. in city hall.

The hearing was continued from May 11 after the developer, William E. Cullen, denied claims by nearby residents that roads, sewers, schools and other municipal services are inadequate to support the project's density of four dwelling units per acre.

Also on the agenda is an appeal by the Casual Corner, 2 Miller Avenue, against the architectural advisory committee's denial of a sign permit for the clothing store. The committee ruled that the sign's letters were too large and did not conform with the building's surroundings.

Tiburon To Eye Antiwar Stand

The Tiburon City Council will consider a resolution to the president and Congress opposing extension of the war into Cambodia when it meets Monday at 8 p.m. in city hall.

The resolution was written at a special town meeting Monday but the council declined to act on it at that time.

Also on the agenda is a hearing on a master plan for a 112-unit moderate and low-income apartment development on the Hilarita site. The Marin County Ecumenical Association for Housing will build the project.

The council will consider establishment of a no-parking zone along the north side of Hilary Drive.

Street, Sausalito; Robert Bernard Ford, 21, of 1106 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Kentfield, and Mark Robert Shanahan, 21, of 1106 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, also Kentfield.

Arrested at their Gate 6 home later in the evening were Mitchell and Steven Howard, ages unknown. Both are being held in Marin County jail, also for investigation of federal drug offenses and without bail.

During the investigation, officers said they made two smaller purchases of cocaine from the seven suspects, buying one ounce for $800 and four ounces for $3,450. They then arranged the airport purchase.

Several officers followed the five suspects from Marin County to the airport, where the quintet met a federal undercover agent who had flown up from Los Angeles, arriving about 7:30 p.m.

About 10 officers took part in the arrest, officials said. The five suspects did not resist.

The haul was believed to be the largest single seizure in which Marin County drug abuse agents have been involved. Officers said the nearly-pure cocaine could have been cut "three or four times" for sale on the open market.

Officers said Miss Booth was employed as a waitress at the Deck House in Sausalito and Miss Freet was a waitress at the Trident also in Sausalito.

doning major military operations" in favor of guerrilla warfare.

A Cambodian military briefing officer said the enemy forces were so disappointed at being unable to take such cities as Kompong Cham and Takeo, the provincial capital about 50 miles south of Phnom Penh, that they are giving up on major operations.

The spokesman predicted the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong will find guerrilla action in Cambodia more difficult than in South Vietnam because of the ancient hostility of Cambodians toward Vietnamese.

MARCH

tors walked into the city to end the 110-mile, five-day march from Perry, Ga., and joined the rest of the throng at King's tomb, beside his Ebenezer Baptist Church.

At the tomb, the crowd, including politicians and labor leaders, sang "We Shall Overcome," the rallying song of the integration movement that King began, and then started the walk to Morehouse College for speeches by the march leaders.

When the contingent from Perry came within a few blocks of the church, a number of dignitaries, including Woodcock and William Genoese, director of the Alliance for Labor Action, took the two empty caskets hauled into town on their shoulders and carried them into the church.

Among those who joined along the route were several persons with placards saying "National Welfare Rights Organization — Peace and Adequate Income Now," and "Nixon started the war to kill the poor."

Children romped along, holding hands, and a teen-aged white boy assisted an elderly black man.

Police blocked intersections along the march route. Mayor Sam Massell cancelled all days off for city police to "provide adequate services on this occasion.

"The purpose of the assembly," he said, "is to dramatize opposition to oppression and rejection of war and it is my intention that our reaction to this position of non-violence shall be a policy of non-violence."

Probation On Pot

Mike Jehuda Jacob, 23, of Mill Valley, yesterday was placed on probation for one year and fined $50 for possessing marijuana in Mill Valley March 17. Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court sentenced him on the misdemeanor count.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

A Family Is When You Meet First Love And Everyone Helps

DEAR HELEN:
You've had just about every "What Is A. ..?" under the sun except mine:

What Is A Family?

A family is a group of close relatives that go through all sorts of hectic things together.

A family is when the bills pile sky high and Mom and Dad are worried sick, but you still get that beautiful formal you wanted for the senior prom.

A family is when Mom yells at you to get your dirty socks out of the closet. Or when you pay your sister 25 cents for cleaning your room, and get grounded because she did such a lousy job.

A family is when Dad whales into your brother for getting his new screwdriver stuck in his bedroom wall (he was trying to make a socket to plug in his radio next to his bed). Or when Mom finds out her best saucepan was used to mix gasoline and oil for his home-made go-cart.

It's when you ruin your $16.00 shoes and Mom swears she won't ever buy you any more, but the very next day she comes home with two pairs, and a real cool skirt and sweater outfit. She'll probably tell you she got them on sale, but she really didn't.

A family is when you meet your first love and everyone "helps." Your sister makes you a dress that fits in all the wrong places but you tell her it's beautiful. But Dad slips you $25.00 to buy something special.

Little sister gets the giggles when you introduce him, and Mom is so fluttery beforehand you'd think it was her first date. But somehow he feels right at home, and Dad ends up talking football to him — while you wait for 15 minutes.

A family is when Mom gives you a home permanent to save money and it turns out looking like a Garfunkel special. So it costs twice as much to have it straightened and styled at the shop, but nobody says "I told you so" — out loud.

A family is when the kids get threatened with permanent grounding because they ate Mom's beautiful creation for the bridge club, which they found loose in the refrigerator. But you're all laughing about it by next week.

A family is when the neighbors call the police because you're pillow-fighting in the front yard at 1:30 a.m.

A family is when everyone laughs, cries and loves together. Once in a while they're hard to live with, but you sure can't live without 'em. — CAROLYN FROM XENIA, OHIO

P. S. If my English teacher sees this I might get an extra-credit "A", Helen.

DEAR CAROLYN:
You win an "A" from me and my readers too. — H.

No Doubt Hems Are Dropping

"Are the hemlines really dropping this fall in San Francisco?"

Gertrude Doane, regional merchandising manager for the I .Magnin stores, had barely seated herself in front of the roomful of students in a retailing class at College of Marin Thursday afternoon when the inevitable question was tossed out by a male student.

Her response — "no doubt about it" — caused a faint moan from the students. "They will be longer, I'm sorry", she said. "We saw hemlines come down in 1947 and that was right after a war had ended. Maybe now we're heading toward the end of another war and our mode of living is influenced by it".

"WILL MY new short coat be out of style this fall?" came another question.

"The coat transition will be the first one and the easy one", Miss Doane explained. "You will be wearing shorter coats with pants, and long coats with short skirts. We call it the split-level look. Frankly, I think you looked cold around the rear in the short coats".

"We will see strengthening in pants suits. Personally, I don't like pants except in the country, or for travel, but that is the first compromise you will make".

"I'd like to see you fight it, but eventually we are all going to be stuck".

"HOW WELL is clothing selling now in the stores:" the students wanted to know.

"The fashion departments are suffering", said Miss Doane. "You're on strike at the moment, hedging, but you're not buying the short skirts either. How many of you have looked at the hems of your skirts to see how much they could be lowered? You're not being honest".

Her stores have just made a massive buy of below-the-knee merchandise, with only a few short skirts.

"Very short skirts were out of style a year or so ago, anyway. We've moved from six or seven inches above the knee to maybe four inches within the last year. We've all soaked up the new look," she said, speaking of people in the fashion trade. "Anything else looks strange to us. Where there has been exposure, there has been acceptance, so eventually your resistance is all going down the drain. The models who have been wearing nothing but the long look for the past six months have accepted it, too.

"But it looks like hell", she added.

SHE SPOKE with enthusiasm of the after-five fashion and insisted there would be no question as to its general acceptance for evening wear. "The fuller skirts, and the long narrow skirts with the slit up to the hip bone are simply elegant for evening," she said.

Having recently returned from a buying trip in Paris, Miss Doane told the students "the look has not been generally accepted there either. They're wearing everything, just as we are".

Attempts, however, are being made to get good tweed skirts, to be worn with wide belts and long skinny sweaters, which will be the school, or campus look, she said. With the tweeds and skinny sweaters will be dark hose and boots.

"Boots are an at ne-cessity and take the edge off the long look", she said. They are worn with all suits, and even with formal evening dresses, including black satin and sequined gowns. Sheer stockings are out, and only the opaques and colors are in.

Hair Spray Removes Ballpoint Ink Stain

The ball-point ink-stain, long-time nemesis of the professional launderer and homemaker alike; has finally yeilded to a most unlikely treatment — milady's hair-spray.

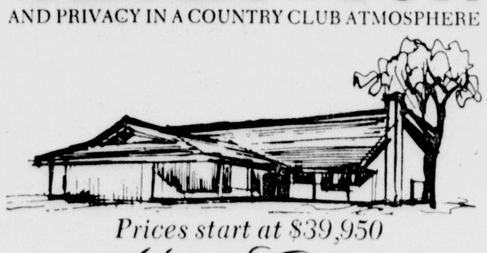

The American Institute of Laundering, educational and research center for the professional laundering industry, has found that hair-spray, applied to a ball-point ink stain and allowed to dry before laundering, effectively removes the formerly unyielding blemish.

Laboratory technicians recommend that any surface ink first be scraped from the fabric; followed by saturation treatment of the stain with hair-spray. After the spray has dried, the fabric may be hand or machine washed in a conventional manner. If any stain remains, the process should be repeated.

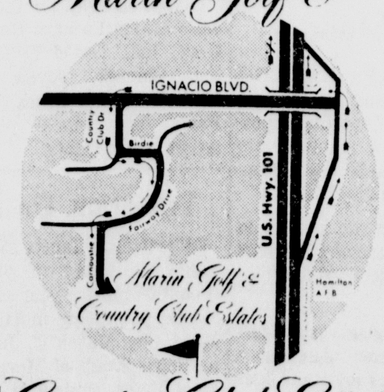

The short-bristle brush such as you use on your pet is ideal to restore the soft texture of fur-like rugs or fabrics after washing. So says the institute, which points out that the brushing should be done while the fabric is still wet.

This practice produces a better separation of the nap than when the material is dry and is also less likely to snag any of the fur elements.

ON THE AGENDA

Audubon Ranch Is Recruiting Volunteers For Training Program

For Marinites wishing to bring the excitement of discovering nature to school children, the Volunteer Council of the Audubon Canyon Ranch will be recruiting volunteers next week in San Rafael.

The 40 volunteers selected will be given an intensive course in the natural history of the animals and plants associated with the Audubon Canyon Ranch in Bolinas. Lectures and field trips will begin in October and continue through next March.

Upon completion of their training, the volunteers will be equipped to go into Bay Area schools to outline the history of the ranch and the Bolinas Lagoon, show slides and provide information on the blue herons and egrets that nest in the redwoods there. Emphasis is placed on nature conservation and on the ecological balance so necessary to the continued presence of the birds at the sanctuary. Shortly after the classroom visit, the children take a field trip to the ranch, and the same volunteers act as tour guides along the trails.

A minimum two-year volunteer commitment is expected of all those who participate in the program.

This naturalist program is sponsored by the Junior League of San Francisco, and is planned and executed by biologists of National Science Education Resources.

Interviews for prospective volunteers will be held Monday and Thursday, at the Volunteer Bureau of Marin in San Rafael. Appointments for these interviews may be made by calling Mrs. Donald Harvey, San Rafael.

THE WOMEN'S Auxiliary of the Babe Ruth League in Novato will sponsor a salad luncheon and fashion show at noon, Tuesday, in the social hall at St. Francis Episcopal Church in Novato.

Mrs. Paul Meaney is chairman, and Mrs. Robert Mazeres will be commentator. Mothers of the players will provide the salads and 10 of the mothers will be models, Mrs. Meaney said.

Proceeds from the fund raiser provides for supplies for the players including baseballs, bats and uniforms.

SAN FRANCISCO Opera Action has invited members and friends to hear American bass-baritone Giorgio Tozzi, "From Behind the Footlights," Tuesday at 12:30 p.m. in the War Memorial Opera house lower lobby. A luncheon will follow.

Mrs. Carl G. Brimmekamp of Kentfield is chairman of the Marin chapter. Marin members planning to attend are Mmes. J.C. Alexander and Edward Shev of Sausalito and Rodgers Broomhead, Edward Elliott, Jefferson Graves Jr. and Ellis M. Stephens of Ross. Reservations may be made with the Opera House.

THE OLEANDER Unit, Marin Foundation, Friends of Arequipa, will meet at the home of Mrs. Arthur Lindauer at the Country Club Estates at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Re-elected for the coming club year are Mmes. Alvin Haag, chairman; S. Ross Cox, vice president; Richard Scholbohn, corresponding secretary; Edward Rifkind, treasurer; Roy Ricksham, historian; and James Cermak, parliamentarian. Mrs. L.T. Kett will be serving her first year as recording secretary.

THE WOMEN'S Department of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will sponsor a rummage sale Wednesday from 5 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Painter's Hall, 701 Mission Ave., San Rafael. Items to be sold include clothing, toys and furniture. The church, located at 375 Calle Arboleda in Loma Verde will be open Tuesday from 2 to 4:30 p.m. to accept rummage from donating parties. Some of the funds derived will be used in the development of the picnic area adjacent to the church.

THE EDUCATION for Childbirth Association of Marin will present its free public film festival Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the Redwood High School auditorium.

Featured films are "A Story about Childbirth" and the Bay Area premiere of "Childbirth for the Joy of It."

Also included in the program will be a panel discussion with an obstetrician, a couple relating their experience and a childbirth teacher.

Chairman for the festival is Mrs. Robert Nerrie of Mill Valley. Mrs. Russel Melquist of Novato is refreshments chairman and Mrs. Thomas Robinette of San Rafael is publicity chairman.

THE MARIN County Parent-Teacher Association Scholarship Association met recently at the home of its retiring president, Mrs. Dallas Wagner of San Rafael, to plan for the awarding of a total of $1500 in scholarships to seniors from Marin County public high schools. Contributions from P-TA dues as well as from some Parent Clubs and individuals form the basis for the annual awards of $250 each. This year's contributions will make possible the awarding of six scholarships. It is also planned to select six alternate recipients to receive the awards in the event that some of the winning seniors are unable to accept the scholarships.

Recipients will receive their awards at a buffet supper to be given for them and their guests by the Scholarship Association on Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Mill Valley Methodist Church.

Inserting Zipper In Fitted Bodice Requires Extra Care

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I have just loved using the invisible type zippers and, for the first time, did a fairly good job of applying them. The last dress I made didn't work out too well. It had a fitted bodice and a waistline seam; the back of the dress bulges out when I sit down. Isn't it possible to use this type of closing for a fitted dress?

MRS. A. F. H.

DEAR MRS. A.F.H.,

The invisible zipper is less flexible than the regular type zipper; however, the manufacturers of this zipper have come out with a nylon invisible zipper that isn't as heavy and stiff.

The problem in a fitted bodice is that the back of the bodice must be exactly the right length. When you fit yourself, tie a string tightly at the waistline and mark the exact spot where the string rests naturally. This should be the waistline seam without any ease or length added. This will probably help more than anything to solve your problem.

I personally prefer the regular light-weight zipper when a fitted bodice is involved. It is hard enough to zip up a back zipper by yourself, even with the aid of a zipper puller, but can anyone tell me how in the world when there isn't a hole in the end of the zipper pull to attach this useful aid?

MRS. RUSSELL Moe, Minneapolis, Minn., is winner of the Tailor Trix pressing board this week for her suggestion:

"I have wondered for the last couple of years why some of the dress manufacturers didn't come out with dresses that featured 'hem-your-own' length. I have put off buying ready-made clothes because they are above my knees, and I look terrible in them. If a poll were taken, I am sure one would find that a do-it-yourself hem would be a selling point."

(Dear Readers: Even though this tip doesn't apply to the home sewer, I thought it was an excellent idea and has been used before by manufacturers of children's coats. The hem could be changed instantly without leaving a mark. What do you think?)

DEAR EUNICE,

Years ago I did all of my own sewing and because of my age and figure, I have been back to the sewing machine again. Whenever I go into a fabric department, I get a very irritating sensation in my eyes and nose and feel that I want to get out in the open air. I didn't notice this when I sewed before. Can one become allergic to fabrics?

MRS. H.W.W.

DEAR MRS. H.W.W.,

The problem is formaldehyde fumes that become more prevalent in air-conditioning due to moisture that is absorbed, leaving a much higher concentration of formaldehyde. In order for fabrics to be wash-and-wear or crease-resistant, it is necessary for them to be treated with a resin finish. The most common type of resin used is a type of formaldehyde, and you will find the degree of irritation depends on the amount of wash and wear fabrics a shop carries. Most women become accustomed to it after a short time, and I do understand that it is not harmful for the individual, just a nuisance.

Seems that with every asset there is a liability, and this is one of them that is found in summer cottons. You will find that most of the beautiful Swiss, Italian and French cottons depend on the fine fibers and construction for crease resistance, therefore they are very seldom treated with a resin finish.

DEAR EUNICE,

With the fashion influence of the Far East in our casual clothes, such as caftans, I would like to know where I can get directions on how to make and drape an authentic turban to make this picutre complete?

MRS. D.R.B.

DEAR D.R.B.,

And to all of my readers, I shall have to call on you to help me once again. If any of you know how to make an authentic turban, please write to me. Perhaps it is simply a matter of using a straight piece of fabric and twisting and shaping it as it is wound around the head. In any event, if you will be kind enough to write me in care of the Independent-Journal, I can pass this on to you through my column.

The Oriental styling and fabrics will be more popular this summer than ever before. It is a casual but elegant approach to at-home type of clothes.

Directions for a pillbox hat, so flattering to most women, are given in the free leaflet, "Braided Satin Pillbox Hat." If you would like to have a copy, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

DRAMA REVIEW

Ross Valley Players Dealing With '50 TV

By GARY TISCHLER

There are times when I think the Ross Valley players have their dramatic feet planted firmly in the television-fifties, when Ozzie and Harriet brightened the living room and Doris Day was teasingly fighting for her virtue.

It is not so much that this particular group performs badly, which it never has yet. It just seems to me that their choice of productions have been consistently bland, safe and antique.

Their current production, "Anniversary Waltz", which can be seen tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the Barn in Ross, is a 1954 play which pivots on the shaky and coy premise that the revelation of premarital hanky-panky on the part of a couple which has been married 15 years would create total chaos, pandemonium, and most incredibly, laughter.

SIDE-SPLITTING?

I think one would have to get pretty well saturated in champagne to find anything side-splitting in this play or anything that might be remotely related to the real world.

I don't think I'm all that jaded, but I can't for the world see how a couple like the Walters and their in-laws and children could possibly exist today. They're like frothy dinosaurs from another age and the thing to do with relics is to let them gather dust, not resurrect them.

TYPICAL FARE

In a way, the play is typical of what the Ross Valley group has presented in the past — good performances of pallid comedies. And the performances and even the pace in this production are, as usual, more than competent, even though I think the play should have been done much like the old-style melodrama, another defunct dramatic and peculiarly American form.

William Derveniotes, as the father-in-law, seems to have caught the spirit of that sort of thing, with an eye-rolling, voice-rolling performance of sheer exaggeration.

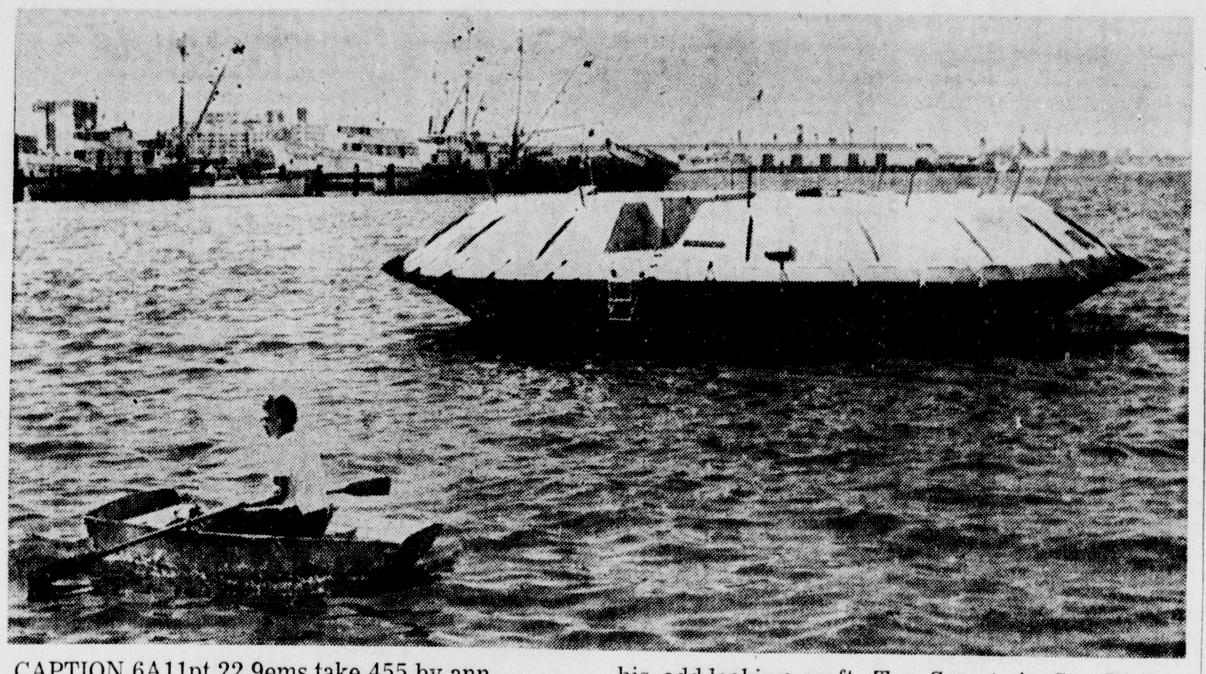

The rest of the cast is fine. Virginia O'Brien is pert and vivacious as the wife and Denny Roberts makes a funny, exasperated husband who is forever kicking in television sets. Good for him.

Bette Jarboe does a fine bit as a breathy, oft-married blonde, while the Walters' rather unreal children are performed nicely by Russ Blum and Janice Rickey.

MORE THAN GIGGLES

I have this peculiar notion that a community theater of any sort somewhat represents the tastes and needs of its community.

I think the citizens of Ross or anywhere else in Marin County deserve a little better choice of plays than strung-out situation comedies like this one. And I think the Ross Valley Players, given something to sink their teeth into, which they haven't lately, would probably come up with something more than 1950s giggles.

A Sailor's Joke On The Landlubbers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Chris Christensen's joke is on the world. He laughs to himself as he steers it up and down the coast. Now 20 months afterward, people still call the cops when they see it out at sea.

"Some think it's turbine powered," he says. "Some think it's solar powered. I let them think what they want."

Once, he let a Coast Guard officer aboard the funny floating saucer to see that safety regulations were being met.

The officer knows what makes it run. He promised to keep it to himself.

Inside is 750 square feet of open space, made livable by wall-to-wall carpeting and drapes, a color television set, a bathtub and a fireplace.

The 13-ton fiberglass craft still lacks radar, Christensen admits — "but will have radar when it's finished." A property owner, he designed and built it at Newport Beach, Calif., in 1968.

No wonder Christensen, a widowerer who was an Air Force gunner in World War II, a man who won't tell secrets, is having so much fun.

No wonder Top Secret is his private put-on's name.

No wonder a man in San Pedro, Calif., and hundreds since in a score of cities, called police as the funny boat came in from the sea.

Dispute Still Simmers On Railroad Crossing

A six-months-old dispute between the City of San Rafael and Northwestern Pacific Railroad, being carried on by mail with the state Public Utilities Commission in the middle, is alive and well.

The dispute concerns pedestrian protection at the Lincoln-Paloma avenues railroad crossing, which is used by children approaching the pedestrian walkway over Highway 101 to Coleman School.

The city wants some type of mechanical warning device at the tracks, and the railroad doesn't think it's necessary.

Meanwhile, the two trains a day, and another two at night, go rolling through and the school children cross the tracks anyway.

Last month a PUC letter, in a series that goes back to last October, asked the railroad to consider a proposal for a train-activated bell and light warning system. The railroad rejected the proposal, saying the system was not needed.

Only four trains a day use the tracks, the railroad said, and all are unscheduled.

The railroad said a school crossing guard or a pedestrian walkway would suffice.

A duplicate of the railroad's reply was sent to the city, but Norris W. Rawles, director of public works, said the letter did not contain a drawing of the vicinity which the railroad sent to the PUC.

Earlier this month, the PUC wrote the city and asked for its comments on the railroad's suggestion.

Rawles replied that the city did not get the drawing, and therefore could not comment on the suggestion.

The PUC wrote again yesterday to Rawles, included a copy of the drawing and asked the city again for its comments.

A PUC spokesman said the burden is on the city because the railroad's recommendations have been made and the city has not responded.

Rawles said the city had not responded because it didn't have the railroad's drawing, and he criticized the railroad for rejecting the PUC's suggestion of the bell and light system.

However, PUC transportation engineer Kenneth Soderlund said the suggestion was put forth merely for consideration by the railroad and was not a PUC recommendation.

Soderlund said there are about 1,000 similar track crossings near schools in the state. "A good portion" have no special protection for pedestrians, he said.

Cherry County, Neb. is nearly as large as Connecticut and Rhode Island combined.

Most Of Sausalito Staff Wins 9 Pct. Pay Boost

Sausalito city councilmen last night tentatively granted 9 per cent pay hikes to the majority of city employees for the coming fiscal year but deferred action on raises for certain job classifications, including that of police officer.

Although their action last night was not official, all five councilmen agreed to give the majority of the city's 65 employees a 7 per cent cost of living increase and a 2 per cent merit raise for the coming year.

The 9 per cent increase, if approved, would be 1.5 per cent higher than George Patterson, the now-departed city manager, had recommended but fails short of the requests from the three major city departments. Firemen have asked for a 12.5 per cent increase, policemen for a 15 per cent hike and public works employees for a 10 per cent raise.

The council has not yet studied salary increases for police officer, police sergeant, fire captain, fire lieutenant, mechanic, planning director and police chief.

Patterson had separated these classifications from his 7.5 per cent package and recommended 10 per cent hikes except for the police chief's position, for which he proposed a 12.5 per cent raise.

The council was scheduled to return to salary deliberations today.

The council last night tentatively approved the hiring of three additional policemen, two additional firemen, a half-time police clerk, a park foreman and a half-time clerk for the public works department.

Police Chief James D. Wright told the council that with the three additional men he could provide a downtown foot patrol every day of the week and it was on this basis that the council approved the additional manpower.

Fire Chief Charles E. Masten told the council that the two additional firemen would help him cut the work-week from its present 72 hours per man. The chief hopes to go to a 63-hour week this year and, with the addition of three more men next year, go to a 56-hour week.

In seeking their 15 per cent pay hike, police officers last night gave the council statistics which show that although Sausalito policemen make more arrests than any other county law enforcement agency, they rank sixth in pay. Policemen cited the high influx of tourists and young people as the reason for the high arrest record. Sausalito policemen made 1,757 arrests last year. In second place was the county sheriff's office which made 1,158 arrests.

Peace Workers Warned To Prepare For Travail

Proponents of peace should be prepared to face jail, stand up under police clubs, and give up homes and cars in order to rid the world of violence, a San Rafael Quaker told a solemn gathering of 150 citizens at the Civic Center yesterday.

The speaker was Phillip Drath, San Rafael building contractor and lifelong Quaker, who in 1967 sailed with the Phoenix crew to deliver medical supplies to North Vietnam.

Jospeh E. Doherty, probation officer, led a peaceful march from the Civic Center entrance, under the Hall of Justice archway, to the south edge of the Civic Center lagoon, where the group sat on the grass to listen to speakers and meditate.

Doherty set the tone of the vigil. He said, "This is a vigil for peace, and as such it will be peaceful all the way." He said nonviolence in a world of violence will be difficult, but it will have to be done despite "one helluva lot of violence going on inside you."

County social and probation workers were joined by other county employees and citizens including professionals like doctors, lawyers and clergymen. The vigil was sponsored by the Marin Branch of the National Association of Social Workers.

San Rafael poet Adrianne Marcus and Rick Beban, 23, former editor of the College of Marin Times, recited a poem for peace called "Voices."

Rev. John J. O'Connor of Terra Linda described the peace movement as the one hope in the time of frustration and despair. "In Marin, we see young people bored, frustrated and despairing. We are part of the Establishment. If they see us speaking out with conviction, we can provide the spark of hope."

John Hitchcock of Mill Valley, who helps run a draft counseling service in San Anselmo, said that the service two years ago served 15 youths per month but now counsels 150 per month.

Ex-Champ's Spouse Nominated For Title

NELLIE BLAGG
San Rafael's choice

Nellie Blagg, a hard worker for the San Rafael Goldenaires, senior citizen group, is San Rafael's nominee for Marin's outstanding senior citizen of 1970.

Mrs. Blagg, who concedes being in her 70s but will be no more definite than that, is the wife of Ernest J. Blagg, who was a co-winner of the title last year.

A native of San Francisco, Mrs. Blagg has lived in Marin since 1917. She lived in Farfax for several years before moving to San Rafael, where she now lives at 205 Laurel Place, Apt. 3.

The Blaggs have a daughter, Dorothy Blagg of Sausalito, and a son, James Blagg of Pacifica, and three grandchildren.

Mrs. Blagg "practically lives," she said, at the San Rafael Community Recreation Center, now in the old courthouse annex, where she works as a volunteer in the office. She also helps her husband purchase supplies for Goldenaires's luncheons and parties and writes for and helps with the publication of the Goldenaires's monthly newsletter.

She was nominated for the title, said Nancy Person, recreation center supervisor, because "she has contributed many hours to the enrichment of the leisure hours of the elderly."

State Crime Rate Rises 7 Per Cent

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Atty. Gen. Thomas C. Lynch said Friday serious crimes reported to California law enforcement agencies increased by more than seven per cent in 1969.

The annual crime and delinquency report showed there were 1,372 wilful homicides, up 15.4 per cent from 1968. There were 6,937 reports of forcible rape, up 26 per cent.

Aggravated assualt increased 10.6 per cent while robberies were up 4.4 per cent.

Lynch said arrest rates for drug law violations was a major contributor with a 38.5 per cent jump in 1969. Excluding drug violations, arrest rates were up 6.2 per cent.

Among the largest counties, Los Angeles County had the smallest increase in felony crimes, at 2.4 per cent. Santa Clara had the biggest increase at 18.2 per cent.

In juvenile arrests San Francisco County had a 20.4 per cent increase and Santa Clara showed a 6.1 per cent drop.

Hayakawa Says Academic Complaints 'Ridiculous'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— San Francisco State College President S.I. Hayakawa of Mill Valley said Friday faculty charges that he abridged academic freedom were "ridiculous."

About 400 of the school's 940 faculty members passed a resolution Thursday that called for an investigation of Hayakawa. It also said he encouraged students to inform on instructors who discussed the Indochina war in class instead of teaching regular subject matter.

"The charge is hypocritical coming from those who would reconstitute the college to propagandize one point of view," Hayakawa said.

He said he has encouraged students to complain "if, when they are enrolled for anthropology, for instance, they are no longer being taught anthropology."

"Usually, they don't dare complain to their own professors for fear of reprisal in terms of grades."

He said there is no one else to turn to for students who resent "having Cambodia discussed in English, philsophy, economics, chemistry, physics, sociology and political science."

Shuttle Buses Set For Mountain Play

A shuttle bus will be run tomorrow to the Mountain Play on Mount Tamalpais from the Marin County Heliport at Waldo. Paul Lobato said the first bus run will leave the heliport at 10 a.m. and following runs will be made as often as feasible.

Lobato is an employee of SFO Airlines, but said the shuttle is not connected with the helicopter operation.

Marin Sends Six Men To Service

Six men were inducted into the armed forces in May by the Marin Selective Service Board, executive secretary Joy M. Kinzer reported yesterday.

Thirty-nine men had been ordered to report for induction.

Mrs. Kinzer said four of these were granted statutory student deferments; five had their induction postponed; two enlisted; five failed to pass physical examinations; 11 failed to report and four refused induction.

The six inducted were Donald J. Dickson of San Francisco, but registered with the Marin board; Craig E. Thomsson of San Rafael; Richard J. Whelan of Mill Valley; Edward W. Bethards; Barry W. Falk and George L. Vicino Jr., all of Novato.

The county draft quota for June is 29, Mrs. Kinzer said, and will be held to men with lottery numbers under 170.

Drop-In House Set To Reopen For Teens

Reopening ceremonies for the Mill Valley Drop-In House, closed two weeks ago for reorganization, will be held tomorrow from 2 to 6 p.m. at the center, 550 Miller Avenue.

The house was set up to provide teenagers with an alternative to "sitting in cars and smoking pot," according to Joseph Walsh, volunteer worker at the center. Facilities for crafts, games and discussion on topics of interest to teens are provided, he said.

SAVING A SUNKEN BARGE

The event which drew the San Pedro School youngsters as shown on page 1 was the raising of a 70-foot barge that had flipped over and smashed a concrete pier in the yacht basin on Thursday. Workmen toiled for hours to raise the damaged craft. A helmeted diver (top) steps into the water — first of two trips — to secure lines to the barge and gropes about (top right) in an attempt to move a sling into position. Finally, the efforts begin to pay off (right) as the barge is slowly righted. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

'James Bond' Suspended As Juvenile Aide

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Sausalito's "James Bond" has been suspended as night superintendent of San Francisco's juvenile hall pending a hearing on possible dismissal.

Kenneth Theodore Chelton, 41, of 370 Ebbtide Avenue, was arrested April 3 and charged with possessing a machine gun. His troubles started on Good Friday, when police answering a noise complaint found Chelton beaten and bloody in his apartment.

He said he had invited two men and two women to his apartment, and was attacked by the two men, who apparently beat him with a wooden Aztec war club.

During investigation, police found a machine gun in Chelton's bedroom. He denied ownership. Chelton, according to authorities, received mail at the apartment under the name "James Bond," and his telephone number also ended in 007, identity number of the fictional British agent.

Chelton was suspended, according to Joseph Botka, chief juvenile probation officer, for the arrest, the brawl, and a lien action for back taxes. In a letter to the civil service department, Botka wrote the incidents show "unacceptable lack of judgement and . . . lack of good moral character which preclude your future employent."

The letter announced the suspension and set a hearing June 11 before Botka for dismissal.

The probation department was notified April 8 that the Internal Revenue Service was placing a lien on Chelton's salary for unpaid federal taxes.

Chelton also faces a preliminary hearing June 4 in Marin Municipal Court on the charge of possessing the machine gun, which reportedly was a World War II Japanese weapon.

School in Greenland is compulsory until the age of 14. Courses include kayak handling and sewing furs.

U.S. Offices Backed For Hamilton

The Novato Chamber of Commerce would like to see offfices of the General Services Administration find a home at Hamilton Air Force Base.

The chamber's board, which met Thursday, sent telegrams to Reps. Don H. Clausen, R-First District, and William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District, asking them to help get the offices at Hamilton. San Francisco has rejected having the GSA offices at Fort Miley in the city.

The board also voted its support of Novato's $2.9 million park bond proposal in the June 2 election, secretary Billie Garl reported, but took no position on the 85-cent increase sought in the school district tax rate limit until the membership is polled.

The board voted to save the City of Novato money by not asking for the final $2,000 of $8,000 the city gave the chamber for promotion in 1969-70. The chamber will ask for another $8,000 for 1970-71, however.

The Novato Chamber of Commerce board also:

DINNER — Set its annual dinner for 7 p.m. June 24 at the Sportsman's Lodge on Highway 101. William A. Gnoss, long-time supervisor who is not seeking reelection, will be honored.

ELECTION — Agreed to count ballots Monday for five new directors. The new board will meet at 8 p.m. Wednesday at Colonial Savings and Loan Association to choose new officers.

Where To Take Aluminum Cans

There is an aluminum can salvage point in Marin, although current publicity over a Bay Area "Can Do" salvage program has excluded the county.

The Marin operation predates the current campaign by several weeks, in fact.

Golden Gate Distributing Co., 1942 Fourth Sreet ,San Rafael, has been accepting aluminum cans for recycling for several weeks. The company will pay 10 cents a pound for flattened cans in 10-pound quantities or larger, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays.

The cans, which have become a litter problem because they do not rust or decay, are recycled at aluminum plants throughout the country.

Ross Valley Flood Control Budget Cut

The Ross Valley Flood Control Advisory Board yesterday pared $42,400 from its proposed 1970-71 budget and sent the remaining $110,000 on to Marin County supervisors for action.

With a carryover of $106,000, only $4,000 must be raised from property taxes and the zone tax levy will be less than one cent, reported Charles E. Murphy, county flood control engineer.

The board made the cuts by cutting reserves from $54,600 to $20,000, and by cutting out $5,000 for a proposed drainage study in Wolfe Canyon and $2,800 for such a study in and near San Anselmo.

The board considered such studies the responsibility of a subzone which is to be formed, Murphy said.

The proposed subzone, which will be before the board of supervisors Tuesday, would include all the watershed of Corte Madera Creek outside incorporated towns and cities. It would be concerned with local drainage problems, while the zone is concerned only with Corte Madera Creek.

The board also agreed to meet at 9 a.m. June 1 at the end of Stadium Way to consider a resident's request that the service road along the creek flood channel be fenced to preserve neighbor's privacy from passersby. The board will look over the area, then adjourn to Larkspur City Hall to consider action on the request.

Sausalitan Faces A Bench Warrant

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A bench warrant was issued for the arrest of Lee D. Malcolm, 26, of Sausalito, after he failed to appear in municipal court Thursday to answer narcotics charges.

Henri P. Baylacq, 26, of Mill Valley, who was arrested along with Malcolm April 15, pleaded innocent to charges of having marijuana for sale and offering to sell marijuana. He was ordered to appear Friday in superior court for setting of a trial date.

Police said the two tried to sell some 450 pounds of marijuana to a narcotics agent.

Mill Valley Board To Discuss War

Trustees of the Mill Valley School District board will discuss the war in Southeast Asia when the board meets Monday at 8 p.m. in Park School.

Also on the agenda are a report on the building of the middle school and discussion and possible adoption of guidelines for a drug abuse program.

Excitement of tossing his sailboat out into the waters of Lake Michigan makes Chicagoan Christopher Freeman, 3, "kick" like a major league pitcher. The young skipper launched his vessel Thursday amid 90 degree heat. (AP Wirephoto)

BUYER HAS COMPASSION

Invalid Loses His Home Over $2 Past Due Taxes

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — The man who bought bedridden Vincent J. Cattee's $11,000 home at a tax sale for $15 and court costs is going to give it back, County Commissioner Richard Muldrew said today.

Muldrew said he had talked with an attorney for millionaire Cecil Platt, who bought the house at a public auction to satisfy a $2 drainage tax, and was assured that Cattee would keep his property.

"I think I could just hug Mr. Platt's neck," said Cattee's 39-year-old wife, Gradie Mae.

"I've just been out in the garage going through all my files making sure that I don't have any bills which I haven't paid. My husband has not known about this. He has cancer and I've just gone through so much, so many operations."

Platt purchased $2 delinquent tax certificates on Cattee's home and 23 other parcels of land at an auction on the courthouse steps more than a year ago.

Mrs. Cattee said she thought the drainage bills she received were copies of originals sent to a savings and loan association which handles her mortgage payments.

"If I had known what was happening," she said, "I would have gone into my piggybank for a couple of dollars."

Muldrew stepped into the case after Gov. Claude Kirk told him it was "giving the state a black eye" and to do something about it.

Cattee has been confined to his bed for seven years. Two brain tumor operations left the left side of his body paralyzed and he broke his hip in a fall two years ago.

Rudy Underdown, Brevard County tax collector, and county assessor Clark Maxwell urged that the Legislature pass a special act requiring all special and district taxes to be included in a single bill. Such an act, they said, would "prevent these tragedies."

GOO Mildly Enthused Over Hickel Oil Plan

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — "This proposal is better than nothing," say conservationists of Interior Secrtary Walter J. Hickel's suggestion that the government buy back from oil companies federal leases for off shore drilling.

The comment Friday from Mayor Gerald Firestone was typical of those who became irate Jan. 28, 1969 when a Union Oil Co. rig in the Santa Barbara Channel burst and sent oil shoreward for 11 days.

"We are glad that the administration is moving," said Lois S. Sidenberg, "but this proposal doesn't mean too much." Mrs. Sidenberg is chairman of Get Oil Out — commonly called "GOO"—which formed after the big spill of last year.

"Stopping drilling in just a segment of the channel is useless," she said. "Oil from elsewhere can still flow in and then you have the same problem."

Firestone also questioned how spillage from outside the sanctuary would be kept from getting in.

"I hesitate to say it is even a step in the right direction," said Sue Higman, chairman of the local chapter of the Sierra Club.

Union Oil had no comment on the proposal.

Alvin C. Weingand, a prime mover behind GOO, called it a "political maneuver."

"This is an election year," he said, "and the Republicans are trying to do something to improve their image environmental-wise." Weingand is a former state senator.

Weingand and Mrs. Higman each observed that the Hickel proposal does not affect the entire channel.

"Somehow spills don't know sanctuaries," Mrs. Higman said.

George H. Clyde, chairman of the Board of Supervisors said "It is almost meaningless in that the leases involved are the least desirable. Their cancellation will not solve the problem and will leave about 40 other leases on each side of the proposed sanctuary open for exploration and production, resulting in almost certain spillage and pollution."

Said Mrs. Higman: "It's like being a little bit pregnant."

Hickel's suggestion, advanced Thursday, would require the approval of Congress. It would involve re-purchase by the government of drilling leases on federally controlled land along 16 miles of populous Santa Barbara area coastline.

Crossroads Rezoning On City Agenda

The Novato Planning Commission will consider rezoning from commercial to planned residential the northwest corner of Highway 101 and South Novato Boulevard at 8 p.m. Monday in the Novato Community House.

The area has been zoned commercial for several years and was known as the Crossroads shopping center. Sedway and Cooke, planners who are making the Novato downtown study, recommended the rezoning for the area.

Other items to come before the commission include rezoning 16 acres in Pleasant Valley from agricultural to planned residential; a self-service car wash for the Tresch Triangle at South Novato Boulevard at Center Road for Albert Tresch and a use permit for Mary Moppet's Nursery School at Novato Boulevard and Eucalyptus Avenue.

Although originally scheduled for hearing, changing of the master plan on San Marin East will be postponed for two weeks, according to the planning department.

Corte Madera Sets Budget Talk Monday

The Corte Madera Town Council will hold the first of two 1970-71 budget meetings at 7:30 p.m. Monday at town hall.

All department budgets except police and fire will be discussed Monday. Police and fire budgets will be discussed at 7:30 p.m. June 10.

McCormack: Be Loyal To President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaker John W. McCormack, soon to end a congressional career that spanned eight presidencies, says Congress should make every effort to back a president, regardless of party, on defense and foreign affairs.

The veteran Massachusetts Democrat, in an exclusive interview with Associated Press, contended his party has a better record in this regard that the Republicans — and has benefited politically.

McCormack did not rule out the possiblity that some compromised congressional position on the Southeast Asia war may yet be approved by the House, which so far has rejected any limitations on President Nixon's Indochina operations.

The 78-year-old speaker repeated his strong support for lowering the voting age and said he welcomes greater participation by young people — in fact citizens of all ages — in politics.

Key questions and answers:

Q. Do you think there will be repeated efforts in Congress to go on record in opposition to the present policy in South east Asia?

A. I would expect there would be further attempts during this year, yes.

Q. But you think the House would probably continue to vote them down?

A. Well, it's according to what the Senate does. If the Senate adopts an amendment which does not take away from the President his constitutional duties and responsibilities as commander-in-chief, why that might present a different situation to the House. . .

I'm not prepared to answer that now until I see what happens. But I don't think it would be wise to completely tie a president's hands, no matter who the president is, in the field of foreign affairs and in connection with the national interest and the ational defense of our coutry.

Q. You have had occasion to stick pretty well with that concept, haven't you?

A. I think that is very fundamental and it would be dangerous for our country to get away from it. . .

Q. We hear a lot about the natural antagonism, the natural tension between Congress and the executive. Have you ever found that to be a severe problem in dealing with eight presidents?

A. It might be a problem with me at times, but not a severe one, because I have always felt the separation of powers in our government. . .

I don't believe that because my party is in control and the chief executive is a member of the Republican Party that we should be a party of blind opposition.

For many years the Republican Party adopted that role when the presidents of the United States were Democrats and the people resented it, and properly so.

Ours is constitutional government, not parliamentary government like in England where the minority party is considered the loyal opposition. Under our constitution and political institutions there should be no such thing as a loyal opposition. The minority party should act affirmatively.

There might be sharp disagreements at times, but it should act affirmatively for the good of our people and in the national interest.

Now, we in the Democratic leadership followed that policy when President Eisenhower was in. It was the right policy from the angle of the government and it was a wise policy politically.

Q. How do you fell about the seniority system?

A. I have never seen a better system, one from a practical angle that more nearly—and when I say a practical angle I mean a human angle—approximates perfection. If any better system can be devised I'd be for it, but I haven't seen one offered yet.

The question of seniority is not a rule of the Democratic Party. It's a custom and a practice, and any caucus can overturn it, always. The caucus has the power now, always did have the power. Most people don't realize that. There have been one or two occasions where a caucus has not accepted a recommendation of the Committee on Committees which handles committee assignments and did not accept a chairman who, in accordance with the practice and custom, was recommended.

The caucus is the master. The caucus is supreme. The caucus doesn't have to accept anybody they don't want. They could change the committee assignment of anybody if they want to.

Q. Mr. Speaker, I was interested the other day in how strongly you came out for 18-year-old voting—

A. Well, I've been for that for years because for me it's an educational test. Are American citizens 18, 19 and 20 years of age collectively qualified to exercise suffrage? The answer to that in my mind is emphatically yea.

Q. We have been seeing that a number of these young people are turning from demonstrations to what you might call conventional political action. Do you think they are going to stick with it, and do you think this is a good thing?

A. Well, I think that being interested in conventional politics as we call it conventional in connection with our established form of government, is an excellent thing, not only for students, young folks who are not students, but for all people no matter what their age. I think it will continue. But I imagine that after the present emotionalism subsides, there'll be a lot of loss of interest. We're dealing with human nature.

JOHN W. MC CORMACK
Speakers' parting views

Q. Do you think it will be a good thing for your own party, and for the other party too, to have more young people actively involved?

A. Yes. I think it's broader than that, more people of all ages are actively involved, because the very type of government we have is represented by the persons who are elected to public life, and that starts at the grassroots among the voters — each individual voter going in and casting his or her vote — determines who's elected to the various offices.

Q. Do you see any signs of what you might call emotionalism subsiding?

A. It's difficult to answer that question. I would think that the great majority of students, the overwhelming majority, don't favor the small group who are radical, and among that small group are some who would like to see the overthrow of the government. I see that even since the recent meeting in Washington, a number of students have given very serious consideration to fighting for what they believe in, but separating themselves from the extremists, those who would lead them along the wrong pathway in connection with the best interests of our government. I am very happy that has happened.

Marriage Dissolution Rate Rises Sharply

BERKELEY (UPI) — The State Department of Public Health reported today that the number of California divorces—now called dissolutions—was 74 per cent higher in the first three months of this year than in the similar period a year ago.

Dr. Louis F. Saylor, state public health director, reported almost 30,000 marriage dissolutions were granted this year in the first quarter as compared with 17,236 in the similar 1969 period.

"We expected this upward trend in early 1970," Saylor said, "because the new law provides that pending dissolutions could be final in six months rather than the previous one-year waiting period."

Persons filing for dissolution, marriage nullifications or legal separation increased 18 per cent during the 1970 period, Saylor reported. The 34,052 petitions represented an increase of 5,211 over the previous year.

Lebanese To Pay Tribute To Gibran

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — His poems are read at hippie weddings and college students have thumbed through them for the past decade. The Beatles have drawn on them for some of their songs.

But when Khalil Gibran, author of the long mystical poem "The Prophet," started writing, officials and maronite Catholic priests in his native Lebanon denounced him.

Priests burned his first work, "Spirits Rebellious," in the Beirut marketplace, calling it "dangerous, revolutionary and poisonous to youth."

NOW, AMENDS

Now Lebanon is making amends to the memory of one of its most famous sons with a week-long Gibran international festival that opens today. Several hundred poets and scholars are to attend, including Soviet poet Yvgeny Yvetushenko.

Gibran was born in mountainous Bisharri, near the Cedars of Lebanon, but left his homeland at age 12 when his family settled in the United States—first in Boston, then on West 10th Street in New York's Greenwich Village. He died of tuberculosis in 1931 at the age of 47.

NEW YORK

Of New York, Gibran once wrote: "He who wishes to live in New York must be a sharp sword in a sheath of honey. The sword is to repel those who are desirous of killing time and the honey is to satisfy their hunger."

Gibran wrote in both English and Arabic, and his works have been translated into more than 30 languages. Scholars find in them the influence of the German philosopher Nietzsche, the French symbolist poets, and the English poet-painter William Blake.

The festival is the second international conference in the city this month. The Ministry of Tourism and the country's Middle East Airlines have been behind the scenes in both affairs, reduced air fares and hotel rates.

WAR TROUBLES

As a result of the 1967 Middle East war, Lebanon lost the tourist trade that used to pass through on its way to Jordan and the Holy Land. The continuing tension has kept tourists away and Beirut's hundreds of hotels practically empty.

To overcome this, tourism officials are making a big pitch for the convention trade and using the Cedars and the ancient cities of Byblos and Baalbeck as special attractions for one-day trips during the conferences.

Those attending the Gibran festival, will go to Bisharri, where the poet is buried, on Sunday. On the way they will pass throught Byblos, the city that gave the Bible its name, and the Cedars, where there is a new resort.

New Theory Challenges Ideas Of How Cholesterol Harms

Cholesterol is only one of many substances floating about in the bloodstream and there is proof that other fatty particles play a greater role in causing the coronary atherosclerosis responsible for heart attacks.

Of greater importance is the fact that the offenders are manufactured by the body and are induced mainly by dietary carbohydrates and, to a lesser degree, by certain animal fats.

Alcohol, coffee, nicotine, and refined white sugar also are implicated.

OUR CHOLESTEROL THEORIES were challenged when researchers identified five types of lipoprotein. Lipoproteins are a mixture of protein and fats (lipids); the protein part ferries fat through the circulation.

Dr. Peter T. Kuo, hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, studied the blood of 334 heart attack victims. Ten per cent had a high level of beta lipoproteins (type II) that carry cholesterol.

Lipoproteins are manufactured in the body via a complex chemical process and are unrelated to dietary fats. (This is in contrast to the blood cholesterol level which is affected by animal fats and dairy products.) Atromid-S, a product that prevents the intestinal absorption of cholesterol (mainly in bile), is effective in type II lipoproteins.

Dr. Kuo found that 90 per cent of the coronary victims had excessive amounts of types III, IV, and V lipoproteins.

CARBOHYDRATES (dietary sugars and starches) extract fat from fatty depots, especially in the obese person, and the fats (lipids) unite with proteins to form those types of lipoproteins. (Alcohol also is a carbohydrate.)

Insulin plays a role in that it stimulates the chemical process. Drugs, such as caffeine and nicotine, also increase mobilization of fat from adipose tissue.

IN OTHER WORDS, the types of lipoproteins manufactured in the body play a major role. None of Dr. Kuo's patients had an excess of type I lipoproteins that come from eating too many fats and oils. On the other hand, anything that adds body weight contributes to types II, IV, and V lipoproteins.

PLANTAR WARTS

S. A. writes: Are plantar warts contagious? There is one on my left sole and I want to know if I should take precautions to protect the other members of our family.

REPLY

Some are, especially those caused by a virus. The contagious variety is more common in children than in adults. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on plantar warts.

HAIRY PROBLEM

L. C. writes: Is it healthier to keep the hair long or short?

REPLY

Long hair is de rigueur for many young adults. In fact, it is sometimes a problem to decide if the person you are walking behind is a boy or a girl. Length makes no difference in health, but short hair is easier to keep neat and clean.

WEIGHT AND PRESSURE

O. B. writes: Do stout men tend to have a higher blood pressure than their lean counterparts?

REPLY

Yes. Obesity does not cause high blood pressure but is likely to aggravate the condition when the tendency exists.

MEMORIAL DAY, 11 A.M.

President Nixon Urges Nation To Join In Prayer For Peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following is the text of President Nixon's "Prayer for Peace" Memorial Day proclamation:

On Memorial Day, we honor our war dead—not only for the sacrifice they made, but for the nation they helped to build and preserve by that sacrifice. We honor them most by remembering what it was they died for—not for glory, not for conquest, but for those concepts that bind a people together in nationhood and brotherhood.

It is not enough to express our gratitude to the heroic dead by thought and prayer and with special reverence on Memorial Day. A more fitting memorial would be the creation of a peaceful world, free of the destructive conflicts that have plagued man's history.

We must, therefore, as individuals and as a nation, continue the difficult quest for tranquillity among all peoples and the reasoned solution of our differences. Mindful of this, the Congress, by a joint resolution approved May 11, 1950, has requested the President to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe each May 30, Memorial Day, as a day of prayer for permanent peace and designating a period during such day when the people of the United States might unite in such supplication.

Now, therefore, I, Richard Nixon, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate Memorial Day, Saturday, May 30, 1970, as a day of prayer for permanent peace, and I designate the hour beginning in each locality at 11:00 in the morning of that day as a time to unite in such prayer.

I urge the press, radio, television and all information media to cooperate in this observance.

As a special mark of respect for those Americans who have given their lives in the tragic struggle in Vietnam, I direct that the flag of the United States be flown at half-staff all day on Memorial Day, instead of during the customary forenoon period, on all buildings, grounds, and naval vessels of the federal government throughout the United States and all areas under its jurisdiction and control.

I also request the governors of the states and of the commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the appropriate officials of all local units of government to direct that the flag be flown at half-staff on all public buildings during that entire day, and request the people of the United States to display the flag at half-staff from their homes for the same period.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this twentieth day of May, in the Year of our Lord, nineteen hundred seventy, and of the independence of the United States of America, the one hundred ninety-fourth.

LONDON (AP) — The Jesuit House of Studies at Heythrop, Oxfordshire, is expected soon to become a part of London University. The move follows concern expressed at the Vatican Council that theological colleges should be linked with secular universities.

Reunion Movement

NEW YORK (AP) — A 12-member United Presbyterian committee has been named to work with members of the Presbyterian Church U.S. (Southern) toward possible reunion of the nation's two largest Presbyterian bodies, split since the war between the states. Redwood Champs Win Finale---Tourney Next

John Boro slammed two home runs and Roger Smith pitched four shutout innings in relief to give Redwood High School a 5-3 victory over Novato and the Marin County Athletic League championship at Larkspur yesterday.

San Marin, which had already clinched second place, rode the final game of pitcher Dennis Bueler's perfect season to a 3-2 win over Terra Linda.

Tamalpais defeated Marin Catholic, 4-3 for a share of third place, and San Rafael defeated Drake, 8-4 as the 1970 season came to an end.

Boro's fifth homer of the season and second of the game to lead off the sixth inning was the winning run and gave Redwood undisputed claim to the MCAL championship. In addition, it gave Boro the League's home run title, one ahead of San Marin's Ken Gnoss.

While the other MCAL teams start thinking of next year, Redwood will get ready for the Tournament of Champions at San Rafael's Albert Park next Thursday through Saturday. Redwood's first opponent will be the Alameda County titlists on Thursday at 9 p.m. Pairings for the eight-team tournament will be announced next week.

Once again it was Smith, this time in relief, who pitched the Giants to victory. He came in with the bases loaded in the third, and after the Hornets scored two unearned runs on a dropped fly ball, he got a strikeout to end the innning and pitched shutout ball the rest of the way. The win was his eighth of the campaign against a single loss.

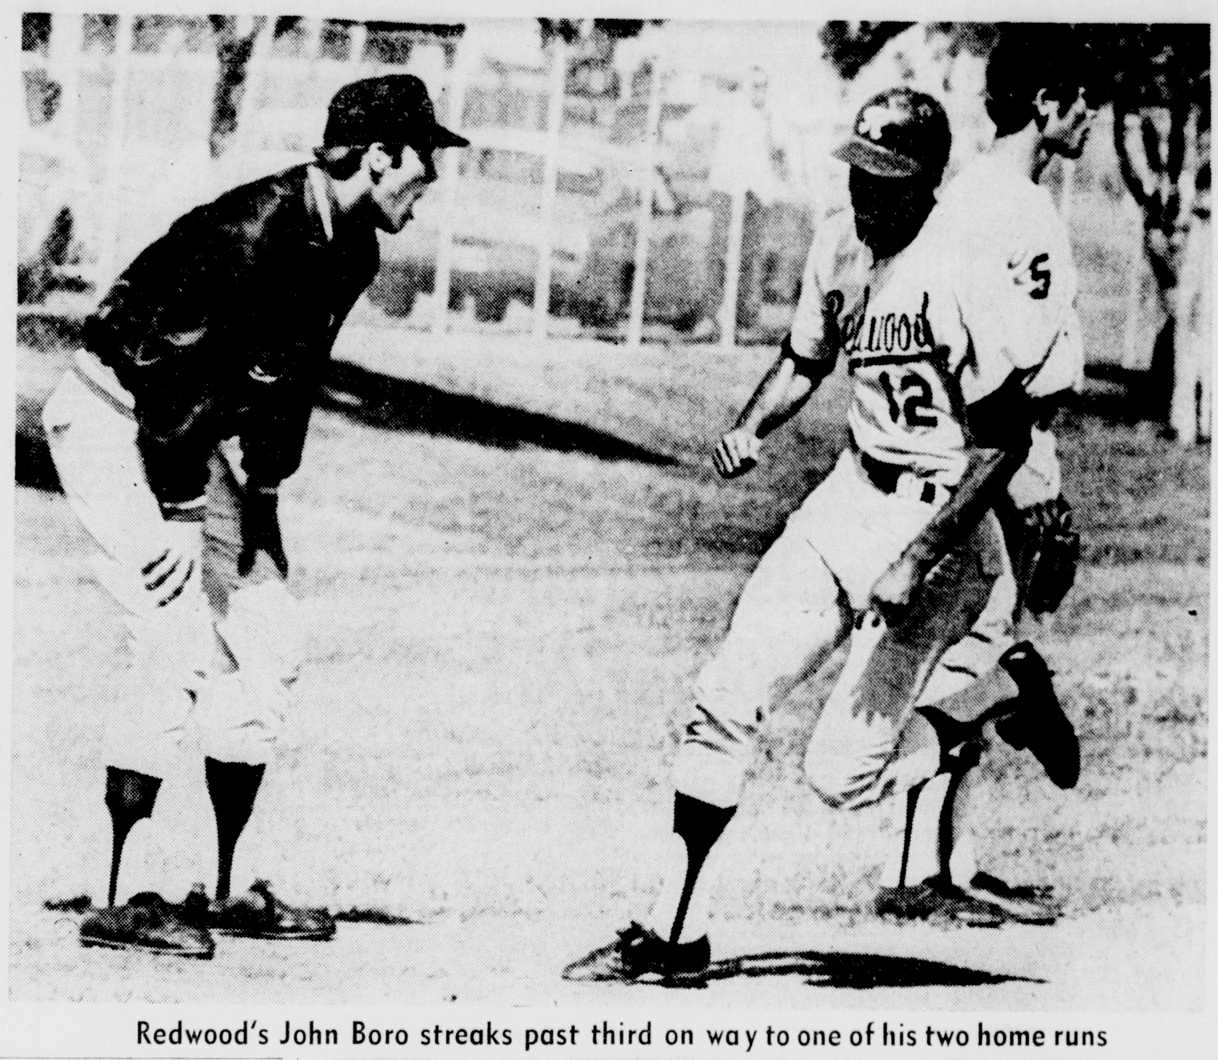

The Giants, who finished with 12 wins and 2 losses in league play, tied the game at 3-3 in the fourth when Joe Caito, who had singled, and Charlie Flynn, who had walked, came home on Smith's infield single that was thrown away at first.

Boro, whose homer in the second had tied the game at 1-1, made a spectacular game-saving catch to shut off a Novato rally in the last inning. Randy Jackson had a solo home run for the Hornets, who finished with a record of 8 wins and 6 losses, tied for third place with Terra Linda and Tamalpais.

Bueler, the flashy righthander who didn't lose a game all year, gained his ninth victory in leading San Marin to a record of 11 wins and 3 losses in this, the Mustangs' second MCAL campaign.

Bueler, who struck out nine and walked two, was staked to a two-run lead in the first inning when Chuck Jacobson scored on Jack Burnam's base hit, and Ken Gnoss came home on a fielder's choice. Jacobson and Gnoss had both singled.

The ultimate winning run came in the fourth when Bruce Hoberg scored on a ball hit to shortstop by Jacobson that was misplayed.

Redwood's John Boro streaks past third on way to one of his two home runs

Terra Linda came within a run in the last inning as Trojan catcher Rick Payne led off with a double and came home on Mike Dito's single. But Dito, trying to score on Jim Cottington's bloop single to right, was thrown out at the plate by Jacobson to end the threat.

The Tam Indians won their final three games in a stretch drive that included victories over San Marin and Terra Linda.

Mike Johnson, benched by an arm injury most of the season, got his second win in a week as he worked the last four innings in relief against the Wildcats.

The Indians, who never trailed, wrapped up the game with two runs in the fifth. Jan brink crashed his second double of the game to score Paul Kime, who had walked to start the inning. Brink then scored on a single by first baseman Tom Fraser.

Marin Catholic finished the season tied for seventh with Drake at 2 wins and 12 losses.

San Rafael, which ended the season in sixth place with 5 wins and 9 losses, exploded for five runs in the fourth inning and then coasted to victory behind Bruce D'Ambra's five-hit pitching.

Chuck Raznikov's two-run triple in the third broke a 1-1 tie, and his run-scoring single in the fourth was one of five Bulldog hits that inning. Mike Spezzi, Gary Nelson, Larry Brazda and Jim Thorne all contributed singles as San Rafael broke the game open.

GOLF ROUNDUP

Marinite Wins State Tourney

Mrs. Lyle (Carol) Bowman of Terra Linda won the California Women's Golf Association championship for the fourth time yesterday, defeating Mrs. John Maurer, 4 and 2, in the scheduled 36-hole finals at Richmond Country Club.

Playing her home course flawlessly, Mrs. Bowman took a commanding five up lead after 18 holes and coasted the rest of the way, although Mrs. Maurer, of the Stanford Country Club, rallied briefly to win the 28th 29th and 30th holes.

Mrs. Bowman, 44-year-old mother of two girls, first won the title in 1965 from then champion Mrs. Lew Gilliom of Whittier. She repeated the victory in '66, defeated Marie Strand of San Bruno for the title in '67, and was runnerup in '68 to Jane Huntsberger of southern California.

49er Quarterbacks Get Extra Schooling

San Francisco 49er quarterbacks and linebackers will go to school for a few days next week as Coach Dick Nolan and his staff give them some concentrated pre-season football education.

An eight-man "class" will report to the 49er Redwood City training camp, Tuesday, and will stay on the scene for a five to seven day period.

This will be the third such indoctrination Nolan has conducted since taking over the 49er head job prior to the 1968 season. He said this session will be highly concentrated with longer class sessions and shorter "on field" work time.

Quarterbacks answering the call will be John Brodie, Steve Spurrier and last year's taxi squad quarterback, Paul Champlin. The full linebacking corps of Dave Wilcox, Ed Beard, Frank Nunley, Skip Vanderbundt and Jim Sniadecki is also expected to report.

Nolan said there is a possibility that rookie John Isenberger, 49er third-round draft choice from Indiana, also might take part in the drills. He will know for certain by this weekend.

Isenbarger missed the club's earlier rookie camp and Nolan is interested in giving him as much pre-season indoctrination as possible. At Indiana Isenbarger worked mostly as a running back, but also played some quarterback and was considered an outstanding receiver.

Nolan said the on field work will not be open to the public.

Cage, Soccer Championships

Terra Linda High School's basketball and soccer leagues, sponsored by the San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department, closed out their seasons Thursday with championship games.

The San Rafael Bulldogs, the only team out of eight not from Terra Linda, won the soccer title with a 2-0 victory over the Fussballers. Andy Colin and Francisco Cepeda did the scoring.

John Buckley scored 30 points for the Spores, while the Magnificent Seven got a 24 point performance from Joe Casteel.

The teams will meet Tuesday night at Terra Linda to decide the overall champion.

Reverse On Iowa Coach

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — "The future looks very bright," said Ray Nagel after being reinstated Friday night as University of Iowa football coach only four days after he had been relieved of his duties.

"Iowa has the greatest fans and friends in the country," said the 43-year-old Nagel, "and we're looking forward to the coming season with enthusiasm."

The university's Board in Control of Athletics announced Tuesday it had relieved Nagel of his duties and accepted the resignation of Athletic Director Forest Evashevski, both actions effective June 30. The board voted to fire Nagel at a special meeting Monday night.

The action came not long after disclosure that the state auditor's office was investigating falsified expense accounts filed by assistant football coaches.

The disclosure was the latest development in a long feud between Nagel and Evashevski, reportedly centered on Evashevski's dissatisfaction with the conduct of the football program.

Nagel told a news conference Wednesday he was told he had been fired because of "disharmony" in the department. He said he was "shocked and incnsed" at the action and demanded a full explanation.

The athletic board met Friday night and voted to reinstate Nagel for the duration of his present five-year contract, which expires Dec. 31.

A statement issued by Prof. Samuel Fahr, chairman of the board, said Nagel and his assistants had promised to make full accounting in the future of all funds used for recruiting prospective athletes.

The statement said the action was taken after a group of Iowa football players said they wanted to play under Nagel this fall.

But the statement dealt mainly with the expense account investigation, and indicated that incident may have played a larger part in the original action than had been thought—and that a state attorney general's report on UI athletic department expense accounts may have been a factor in Nagel's reinstatement.

"On the basis of the facts now known, the attorney general of the state of Iowa does not recommend a criminal prosecution in the case of certain falsified travel vouchers . . . " the statement said.

"While the board has reconsidered its decision and has chosen to retain Mr. Nagel through the 1970 football season . . . he has been reprimanded for his past conduct and failure to cooperate with the university president and the board," the statement said.

Giant Plight: Big Offense, No Defense

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The struggling San Francisco Giants have many problems as they languish three games below .500, but one of them isn't a lack of run-production.

This was evidenced Friday night when the Giants exploded for nine runs on nine hits in a 9-4 rout of San Diego—a victory that jumped San Francisco two games ahead of the last-place Padres in the National League western division.

Actually, it was a close game until Ken Henderson cracked his second grand-slam homer of the season in the eighth inning. The blast was the Giants' sixth 'slam of the year—only three shy of the National League record.

The Chicago Cubs blasted nine 'slams in 1929, a mark obviously in jeopardy since the Giants have 121 games remaining. The nine runs gave San Francisco 226 in 41 games, an average of 5.4 a game.

SLOW START

"Scoring runs certainly hasn't been our big worry," says manager Clyde King. "But defense has been a factor in our slow start and we just don't have much pitching depth."

Right-hander Rich Robertson went the distance for a team-high fourth complete game against the Padres, striking out nine and boosting his record to 4-3.

"Confidence is the big thing," said Robertson, whose 3.72 earned run average tops the club. "In the past I'd always been a spot starter and it's awfully tough to put it all together in that situation."

As usual, the Candlestick Park wind was discussed. It was a factor in two first-inning passed balls by Giants' catcher Dick Dietz. That helped give the Padres a 2-0 lead.

OFF BALANCE

"Those two pitches were fastballs that just took off—they were like knuckleballs," explained Robertson. "The wind was throwing me off balance, but it was making my ball move better."

Dietz doubled and scored in the second before giving the Giants a 4-3 lead with a two-run homer in the fifth.

"I was handcuffed on those passed balls—the wind did some strange things," said Dietz.

"But," he added, "I'm content with letting two runs in if I can come back and bring three in while we win."

King and Dietz point out the Giants should have seven grand-slams. The catcher was credited with a bases-loaded triple rather than a 'slam on a disputed call in a game at San Diego last week.

"Both of Dietz' blasts were on belt-high fastballs," recalls ex-Giant Mike Corkins, 3-4, who served up the controversial clout in San Diego and the homer Friday night.

"The wind bothered me. It was blowing in my face and affected my fastball."

Economist Testifies For Flood

NEW YORK (UPI)—Robert R. Nathan, a prominent international economist testifying on behalf of Curt Flood in his suit against baseball's reserve clause, said Friday baseball's reserve system was unparalleled in the business world and created imbalance.

Nathan was the only witness to testify Friday n federial court before Judge Irving Ben Cooper. The trial for Flood, an outfielder for the St. Louis Cardinals for 12 seasons who is challenging the reserve clause after being traded to Philadelphia, was set to continue Monday at 10 a.m.

Nathan said the reserve system, which binds a player to the team which holds his contract, creates an imbalance between employer and employee in bargaining negotiations.

"The system has a depressing effect on wage levels because there's no opportunity to negotiate with the user of his services," said Nathan.

RICH GET RICHER?

Confronted by the argument that abolition of the reserve clause would allow the richer teams to accumulate the top players, Nathan said, "there is no tendency for top talent to aggregate to one employer.

"In a free society, there are not many groups that stay on top of the heap very long and under our system, there is a remarkable distribution of talent."

Nathan said that while money is still the predominant factor, it does not always determine control of the market since other factors, such as loyalty, must be taken into consideration.

A's Finally See Turning Point

CHICAGO (AP) — It was a bitter pill for the White Sox but a hypo for the Oakland A's.

The White Sox jumped off to a six-run lead in the first inning Friday night following three walks, a pair of singles and a three-run homer by Ed Herrmann.

They picked up two more on a two-run homer by Carlos May in the fourth. Then they stopped cold.

The A's, struggling throughout the season and getting excellent help from the bnech, picked up a run on Tito Francona's pinch single in the second inning.

A run-scoring pinch single by Dick Green and a three-run pinch homer by John Donaldson cut further into Chicago's margin..

The A's then went on another four-run rampage in the eighth inning as Felipe Alou doubled home two runs and then scored the winning run as John Matias dropped Don Mincher's fly ball for an error."

"The club really battled back," said Manager John McNamara. "Nobody quit. Maybe that's the one that'll turn us around. They've done it before but this time they went all the way."

Charlles O. Finley, owner of the A's, swept into the dressing room and after congratulating several of the players, Finley turned to McNamara and said "That's the spark we've been waiting for. That's the one that will turn us around."

McNamara wasn't looking for the big hit when he sent Donaldson to the plate for shortstop Bert Campaneris.

"Campy pulled a muscle in his leg and finally said he couldn't run hard so I used Donaldson as a pinch batter since he'd be the replacement on the field," said McNamara. "His homer was a big dividend."

Actually it was the bench that kept the A's in contention. Their first five runs were driven in by pinch batters and the winning rally was started from the bench. Jose Tartabull came in Tartabull had a 3-1 count and to pinch bat to open the eighth.

Tartabull had a 3-1 count and then fouled off a pitch which jumped back and hit him in the jaw. Larry Haney replaced Tartabull and walked. Two outs later Rick Monday walked. Sal Bando singled home a run and Alou tied the game with a two-run double. Matias then dropped Mincher's fly ball to complete Chicago's total collapse.

Weiskopf Holds Lead In Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Chuck Courtney, a quiet Californian, had barely begun his second round in the $125,000 Atlanta Golf Classic Friday when tall Tom Weiskopf took control at the halfway point with an 11-under-par 133.

Courtney, a 29-year-old bachelor who joined the PGA tour in 1964, fashioned his second straight 67 over the hilly, 7,053-yard Atlanta Country Club course as sweltering 90-degree heat baked the fairways, greens and players for the second straight day.

Courtney's 134 total gave him second place by two shots over a trio deadlocked at 136—Gary Player, Tommy Aaron and Dan Sikes, whose 65 was the low score of the second round.

"I always feel pressure," said Courtney. "Anybody that says they don't are just kidding themselves. But the secret is Arnold Palmer's secret when he was playing so well. You've got to get fired up without getting nervous."

Asked if he hoped to catch Weiskopf in today's third round, Courtney smiled and replied, "I'd like to catch him Sunday."

PAY DAY

That's pay day, with $25,000 going to the champion, an amount only $85 less than Courtney won in 1967—his best money-winning year on the tour.

"I hit my irons extremely close to the hole all day," said Courtney. "I feel like I'm hitting the putts great, but they're

It was on No. 10 that Player just not going in. I hit all the greens on the back side but had a couple lip outs."

Meanwhile, Weiskopf had added a 68 to his opening round 65, stringing out nine straight pars on the back after knocking in four birdies going out.

"I think its the best two rounds I've put together since I've been on the tour," said the 6-foot-3 Weiskopf. "I continued to putt well, had some good lags and I kept hitting it to the pin."

CHARGING PLAYER

Player, the little South African, was charging for the lead after turning the first nine in 32, four under par.

"I had it going so well," Player said, as he thought of what might have been. "I think No. 10 prevented me from shooting 64."

It was o n No. 10 that Player missed a two-foot putt that would have given him another birdie.

"I got a little shook up," he said. "I missed another two-footer at 16 and took a bogey. I guess I just ran out of gas putting on the back side."

Two Atlanta Classic champions, Bert Yancey in 1969 and Bob Lunn in 1968, were deadlocked at 137 with veteran Kel Nagle.

Jack Nicklaus, who sank an 80-foot putt for an eagle on the 577-yard No. 8, and Lee Elder stood at 138.

Eight players were lodged at 139, including Homero Blancas who skied to a 74 after sharing the first round lead at 65. Others at 139 were John Schroeder, Arnold Palmer, Frank Beard, Doug Sanders, George Knudson, Lou Graham and Larry Hinson.

It took a score of one-over-par 145 or better to survive the cut for the final 36 holes today and Sunday, with 74 players on or under the mark.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Bob Knight, West Point's basketball coach, is the No. 1 candidate to head the Phoenix Suns next season in the National Basketball Association, general manager-coach Jerry Colangelo said Friday.

Colangelo said the job had been offered to Harv Schmidt of the University of Illinois, but Schmidt had turned it down.

Colangelo said the job had of signing Knight was "about 50-50." Knight coached Army for five years.

USC Still Tops In Coast Race For NCAA Final

LOS ANGELES (AP) — This is the first year that the "new" Pacific-8 baseball race ends in a tournament to see which team plays in the NCAA finals, and even with the changes Southern California still comes out of the pack first.

The Trojans who had the best Pac-8 record during the regular season, bopped rival UCLA 8-4 Friday to remain unbeaten in the double-elimination tourney prior to today's final round. The Bruins, after a 13-2 walloping of Oregon State, play USC today for the right to represent the conference in the college world series June 12-19 at Creighton University.

Brent Strom of the Trojans won his 12th game of the season against only one defeat, and his fifth without a loss in the Pac-8, by whipping UCLA on Friday. He scattered eight hits and went the distance.

UCLA came back with a 15-hit attack to bury OSU in the day's third game, In the first game of the day, OSU stopped Northern Division champ Washington State 10-4.

Lean toward the pins as you near release to guarantee good forward motion at actual release. By remaining straight up, you'll probably drop the ball. It will slide, not roll toward the pins.

There's No Use Seeking Pill To Improve A Witless Game

Many a bridge player would love to be able to take a pill to improve his game.

Unfortunately, there is no such pill, but one of my cynical friends says that it might help to give your partner a sleeping pill.

Opening lead — ♠ Q

South won the first trick with the ace of spades and promptly drew three rounds of trumps. Then, smiling happily over this little bit of butchery, South led a diamond.

STARES AT TROUBLE

West played low, and dummy won with the queen of diamonds. Now South stared hard at the dummy in the effort to find an easy way back to his hand. When staring didn't help, South led a club from dummy.

The defenders took two club tricks and then knocked out dummy's king of spakes.

SIMPLE PLAY

South didn't need a pill to make his game contract; a simple play would have done the job for him. After winning the first trick with the ace of spades South should draw only one round of trumps. Then he should lead a diamond toward dummy.

West must play low, and dummy wins with the queen of diamonds. The difference is that South can return to his hand by leading dummy's remaining trump. South can afford to draw all of the missing trumps and may even lead an extra trump or two if he likes.

Declarer then leads his other diamond and is sure to get to dummy with the king of spades to discard a club on dummy's king of diamonds.

DAILY QUESTION

You have passed as dealer, and partner opens with one heart in third position. The next player passes, and you hold:

♠ - Q J 10 7
♥ - 8 4
♦ - A 9 7 4
♣ - A 5 3.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid 2-no trump promising 11 or 12 points and strength in the unbid suits. If you make the "normal" response of one spade, partner may decide to drop you even if he has about 14 points in high cards. However, avoid this kind of jump response if your partner likes to make exaggerated weak opening bids in third position. (Avoid such partners, also.)

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, May 23, the 143rd day of 1970 with 222 to follow.

The moon is between its full phase and last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus, Mars, and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1701 Captain William Kidd was hanged in London for piracy and murder.

In 1939 the U. S. Navy submarine "Squalus" sank off New Hampshire in 240 feet of water and 33 of the 59 men aboard were rescued by a diving bell.

In 1960 Israeli agents captured Adolf Eichmann in Argentina and spirited him back to Tel Aviv. Eichmann was convicted of being a mass killer of Jews in World War II and was hanged.

In 1965 the Organization of American States set up a peacemaking force in the Dominican Republic to stand between rebel and loyalist factions.

A thought for the day: Norwegian poet Henrik Ibsen said, "I hold that man is in the right who is most closely in league with the future."

Education Board Fund Autonomy Is Topic

A proposal to get fiscal autonomy from Marin County government will be discussed when the administrative services committee and other members of the Marin County Board of Education meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Marin County Schools Office.

The board last Monday rejected a proposal which would give it control over its own budget because it did not give the board its own legal counsel and right to appoint the superintendent of schools. The proposal was referred back to the administrative committee for redrafting.

Endorsement Of Candidates Not Arrived At Lightly

THE SEASON for election decisions is upon us.

As election day (June 2) approaches, the editorial and news staffs of ethical newspapers — and we of the I-J place ourselves in this category — bend every effort to supply readers with all reliable, factual information necessary for making intelligent choices among candidates and intelligent decisions on ballot propositions.

A voter who reads everything in the I-J on every local issue and every local election contest, we confidently believe, will have the information he needs to make intelligent decisions.

For those of our readers who want or need even more, we sometimes endorse candidates or support or oppose ballot propositions in our editorial opion columns on our editorial pages.

YOU CAN HEAR IT SAID that newspapers — and other news media, too — bend or slant the news to make it appear to support their opinions, beliefs or desires. Regrettably, this may be true of unethical newspapers. We hope it never happens, even unintentionally, in the I-J.

The staff of the I-J is dedicated to presenting election campaign information as objectively and impartially as is humanly possible in our news columns.

Our opinions are confined strictly to our editorial page.

WHEN WE ENDORSE a candidate, it is not because he is likely to win, or because he has somewhere along the way done something of special benefit to the I-J, or because he happens to be a close personal acquaintance of some I-J staff members.

When we endorse a candidate it is because we genuinely believe that his ascension to office will best serve the people and the community as a whole.

On the face of it, this makes the matter of selection endorsement rather simple, once all available facts are in hand.

It may seem simple enough, but it can be most painful if it turns out that the man who appears to be best qualified is someone other than a close personal friend in the race, or someone other than the leading I-J booster and cooperator in the race, or someone whose political party affiliation is not what you wish it were.

Trying to choose a candidate for endorsement this year among the 13 lawyers contesting for the vacancy on the municipal court bench is an example of just how difficult it can be to make a choice.

First, there are a scattering of personal acquaintances and friends of long standing among the 13. Second, there are those whose partisan political efforts have at times either coincided with or differed from I-J views. Third, every candidate and his principal supporters honestly believe that he is the best qualified. (Endorse one and his opponents and their principal supporters think the I-J has lost its marbles.)

Truth is, there probably are several very well qualified candidates in the group and the public would be well served by the election of any one of them. Further, predicting how a judge is going to act once he is in office is risky business; you have only to look at the long history of the U. S. Supreme Court to see how frequently a seemingly questionable choice turned out to be a great jurist and how many times a promising choice turned out to be undistinguished.

IN THE REPUBLICAN PRIMARY to select a party candidate for state Board of Equalization, the I-J has endorsed former Supervisor Ernest Ketenhofen of Marin. There is no question but what his ultimate election would well serve the best interests of all the people of the 26 counties of the district; but there are other well-qualified candidates, too.

The race for the Republican nomination for state senator presents a difficult choice. The two leading Marin candidates are widely known and respected; they have demonstrated abilities which would seem to qualify them for ultimate election. But Donald Pinkerton of Solano County quite probably would, if ultimately elected, be the most effective legislator of the three. An intellectually honest endorsement in this race must take all these factors into account.

ALL OF THIS IS by way of saying, when you read I-J political endorsements and recommendations on ballot propositions, you can be sure they came about only after considerable study and soul-searching, some of it rather painful.

When you see a contest with "no recommendation" from the I-J, you can be sure that either neither candidate was felt to be outstanding or that both appear qualified to serve the people reasonably well.

Most important of all, if I-J editorial arguments and evaluations have helped you to see the issues more clearly enabling you to arrive at your own ballot decisions with better perspective, our efforts will have accomplished their principal purpose.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to Boy Scouts of Marin, who are showing some of their skills today at the Scout-O-Rama at Forest Meadows in San Rafael—always a good show.

BRICKBATS to trustees of Lagunitas School District for approving false minutes to try to cover up the fact they had in closed session to dismiss three teachers. And still some people fail to recognize the dangers in closed sessions of public bodies!

BOUQUETS to San Rafael and Terra Linda high school students who learned something about the roles of city officials during Youth in Government Day.

BRICKBATS to County Administrator Alan Bruce for reviving the "fiscal irresponsibility" proposal which would eliminate board of supevirsors' control over tax levies for the county schools office, and to Supt. Virgil S. Hollis and the county board of education for wanting even more autonomy than the administrator proposed to give them.

Stop All War Aid If Sincere

Attention, doves of peace:

It is a universally accepted fact that one cannot be a little bit pregnant.

If as you say, you are totally committed to the United States getting out of the military engagement in Southeast Asia as of now, why stop there?

Why not recall the troops from Korea, American blood is being let there too.

Then there is the military effort in Germany. Recall the men from there, also Japan, and all other outposts around the world.

Stop sending military aid to Israel, or money, and that would include any contributions — (unless they are first taxed, and the money collected used for American environmental efforts).

Stop all aid of any kind to any country, or area that is in any way involved in any type of conflict, regardless of how remote.

Only two diametrically opposed actions can you follow:

1. Be totally against all war efforts by the United States, or
2. Continue to be hypocritical.

LINES ON LIVING

We Are Only Human— But That's Not All Bad

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

There are too many young prophets of doom and gloom among us who see nothing but black clouds on our national horizons. And there are too many guilt-ridden professionals in our society who are ready to expose themselves to self-flagellation. Constructive criticism for self-improvement is a most desirable trait of humanity; destructive self-devaluation can be a neurotic national sickness.

We are not the salt of the earth, neither are we the scum of the earth. We are not the chosen of God, neither should we be the rejected of our children.

We are the products of ages and stages of civilization — countless thousands of ancestral lives live in each of us. We are not a summary of civilization; neither are we the genesis of modern life. We are only a partial tally in the reckoning of generations and civilizations.

WE ARE ONLY human. And that means many many things. It means that we saw man walking on another world, but we also see men killing one another in the streets of our own world. It means that we are the world's most technologically advanced society, but perhaps also humanity's most restless element. Many of the sins of our fathers — of ommission and commission — are visited upon us, as many of our own sins are visited upon our children. And theirs will be inherited to their children. Humanity and humans of all times are linked together in a chain of glory and infamy.

Each generation must be doing its appointed task. We are doing ours. We have succeeded sometimes and we have failed many times. We have hoped and dreamt far more than to find ourselves satisfied and fulfilled. We have been saints and sinners, magnificent creators and selfish consumers — creators of unnatural beauty and polluters of natural beauty. But we are human — sometimes more sometimes less — but human, only human.

We play God and devil, often all too effectively. Remember Auschwitz, remember man on the moon. We have discovered the atom, but we have not yet discovered all of ourselves. All this makes us human, terribly human. But this generation, in spite of its human failings and blunders, has made modest beginnings toward the society of a better humanity.

PERHAPS it is to the credit of our heritage and system that you hear the voices of contagious fervor and restlessness here in America. The very fact that they are permitted to be heard points up the strength in the sinews of American institutions. Such voices of dissent cannot be heard today in the Soviet Union's land of the great Revolution. Because when democracy is dead, everything is quiet.

But the time has come to heal our internal wounds, to bind up the blood-festering sores that polarize our society. This is a time for dialogue — not dualogue.

I've heard it preached that the destruction of a country in Southeast Asia by man is wrong, but the destruction of the American system by whatever means, is right. I've heard it said that the love concept of the older generation is hate, but the hate of some "kids" against their parents is love. I've heard it told that we owe everything to our children and that they owe nothing to us, that we must listen to them but they don't have to listen to us.

WRONG. That's not dialogue. That's dualogue, an arid form of confrontation, that will invite nothing but violent action and counter retribution.

Perhaps the words of John F. Kennedy in Dallas before he was felled by violence are prophetic for our time: "The righteousness of our cause must always underlie our strength. For as was written long ago: 'Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain.'"

No Security In Withdrawal

Senators McGovern, Church and others have recently called for public support for an amendment regarding the Vietnam war. It carries a patently inappropriate label that it will end the war. Unfortunately, neither this amendment nor Senator McGovern has the power to effect the second coming — although it may attract additional votes in the interim.

I have two very young boys and I am most concerned about this war — I want it ended, not to be resumed at a later date with my sons as its soldiers. Ended definitively by military or diplomatic means when possible; not postponed by a meaningless withdrawal which will only cost more lives later than it saves now and which is rationalized by spurious economic and ersatz-humanistic arguments. Our withdrawing could allow the Viet Cong to consolidate its own and similar groups operating in Cambodia, Laos, Thailland and Burma—to be followed by what? We should follow the late President Eisenhower's advice and pursue the enemy to its lair — be it in Cambodia or elsewhere. What a nightmarish mimicry of a game it had been when the Viet Cong could step back across the magic river into Cambodia, say "King's X", and we had to stop shooting until they chose the advantageous time and place to resume . . .

I believe these senators are making a sticky mess worse. They could spend their time more usefully by passing real gun control laws, stiffer congressional ethics codes, stiffer lobbying control laws, and controlling pork barrelling and junketeering.

Paper Recycling Subsidy Suggested

Experience shows that money can be used as a powerful lever of public behavior. For example, areas favored by law taxes flourish with business activity. Exploiting this leverage to gain broad public interest and participation might be valuable to the I-J in newspaper recycling. This could be accomplished by offering lowered subscription rates to those who return their used newspapers to the I-J trucks on monthly pickup days in each neighborhood.

The savings in trees not cut, garbage not accumulated and air not polluted by home burning of papers would be substantial.

Asylum For Vietnamese Needs Careful Working Out

WASHINGTON — Like the ghost at the banquet, the very words "blood bath" strike fear to the heart. In his press conference after the decision on Cambodia, President Nixon said that precipitous withdrawal as advocated by "many of our very sincere critics" would allow the enemy to enter Vietnam and "massacre the civilians there by the millions."

That is not the first time the President has raised the peril of mass slaughter in the event of a rout of American forces or a pull-out so abrupt that the South Vietnamese could not defend the country. Not an idle bogey serving scare purposes, it deserves more serious consideration from those in Congress pushing for a quick end to American participation in the war.

As Sen. Harold Hughes, D.-Iowa, noted in the joint broadcast of the four principal sponsors of the end-the-war amendment, that amendment provides that funds may be used after the cut-off for the safe and systematic withdrawal of United States military personnel, the exchange of prisoners, and "for the arrangement of asylum for Vietnamese who might be physically endangered by the withdrawal of United States forces." This last has been a concern of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., since he put in a resolution providing for asylum a year ago.

FROM TALKING with McGovern, however, it is clear that the proposal for asylum has not been formulated with anything like the definition or on the scale required. He is hopeful the United Nations could oversee a resettlement program, with Washington helping to persuade neighboring nations to open their borders to Vietnamese refugees.

McGovern believes that whatever the degree of their take-over in the south, with a complete and rapidly phased withdrawal of American forces, the communists would not find it to their interest to slaughter a large number of people. In the course of the land reform program in North Vietnam under Ho Chi Minh, it is estimated 50,000 to 60,000 peasants were liquidated.

A REPORT has just come out on the "Viet Cong strategy of terror" that deserves the most sober consideration. One reason is that the author, Douglas Pike, has earned in his years in Vietnam a reputation for careful judgment. His last book, "War, peace and the Viet Cong," was praised by those on both sides of the issue of American involvement. Since 1958 he has been an officer of the United States Information Agency.

His detailed description of the unearthing of the bodies of civilians massacred during the 1968 Tet offensive at Hue is spine-chilling. The estimated 5,700 civilians were killed, Pike was convinced by his on-the-spot investigation at Hue, as a calculated effort to liquidate all opposition.

After about three weeks the communist grip on roughly half the city, the cultural capital of Vietnam, was broken. Only over a period of months were the mass graves uncovered. They had been concealed, Pike writes, with great care in areas almost impassable.

"The first fact," he writes, "and perhaps the most important, is that despite contrary appearances, virtually no communist killing was due to rage, frustration, or panic during the communist withdrawal at the end."

FROM HIS ANALYSIS of the Hue massacre, Pike outlines what he believes would happen if the communists were to win decisively in South Vietnam. First, all foreigners would be cleared out immediately, and especially the several hundred foreign newsmen reporting from there. A curtain of ignorance would descend and the outside world would know little or nothing of what was happening.

Behind that curtain the night of the longknives would begin. All political opposition, actual or potential, would be systematically eliminated. Then would come personal revenge, a small wheel turning within the larger wheel of communist retribution, as Pike puts it.

SINCE THIS report was prepared for the U.S. mission in Saigon it may be discounted. But in the opinion of this observer, a carefully planned and thought-out program of asylum, with far more reality than is now in sight, must be evolved. That would help to ease American withdrawal since, obviously, given the state of opinion in this country, American troops cannot remain indefinitely to insure against catastrophe.

ART BUCHWALD

Everybody's Writing Letters, And Misspelling The Words

WASHINGTON — If anyone has any doubts that this country is uptight, he should read the mail that's pouring into the newspapers, television stations, networks and politicians, offices. Not since I proved conclusively that there was no such person as J. Edgar Hoover (I said he had been invented by the Reader's Digest) have I received so many letters from people wanting to give their opinions of "the situation."

The mail breaks down something like this:

THOSE WHO AGREE with what I have been saying have been writing highly intelligent pithy letters and indicate they represent the same true honest American spirit that has made this country great.

Those who disagree with me have written idiotic missives that are pointless, repetitious and disappointing in content. One can only gather that the people who have taken issue with me are bigoted, narrow-minded and are unable to grasp the "big picture."

There seems to be a trend these days, when writing a letter, to send copies of it to 10 other people at the same time. For example I am receiving copies of dozens of letters that people have sent to President Nixon. I feel embarrassed reading these letters because I'm certain President Nixon hasn't read the originals, and I hate to read his mail before he does.

The four-letter word has come into its own and the sexual act now precedes the name of any person in the public eye.

You can usually tell how worked up a country is by how many letters you receive from people who write on the envelopes after they seal them. Lately this percentage has reached a new high. It doesn't bother me too much, but it's been really shaking up my mailman.

IN A RECENT survey, CBS discovered that less than 50 per cent of the American people believed in the Bill of Rights. I can confirm their survey. The solutions that people have for dissenters in this country are as follows:

"All blacks should be sent back to Africa." "All students should be sent to Vietnam." "All liberals should be sent to Russia." And "All protesters should be sent to jail."

I have discovered that there is a shortage of writing paper in the United States and more and more people are scrawling their thoughts on the newspaper itself and sending it in. Also, many people are saving money by signing one letter with six or seven signatures. I don't mind this but I'm hard put to know which person deserves an answer.

THESE ARE the conclusions that can be made from my mail:

More and more people are taking an interest in what is going on in the world and getting involved.

This is a very dangerous thing because you can't have a democracy if everyone wants to participate.

The Silent Majority is not now and never has been silent.

Educated people can't spell. This is particularly true of students and secretaries who take dictation.

20th Century Earthquakes Illustrate Nature's Force

A recent earthquake in Gediz, Turkey, served as a grim reminder that of all nature's destructive forces, perhaps the most deadly and least controllable are earthquakes.

As the town's surviving inhabitants began to dig out their relatives from the rubble, even while after shocks continued to jolt the region, estimates of the number of people killed ran as high as 3,000.

In one nearby town, only three structures were left standing and in the region surrounding Gediz, some 90,000 inhabitants were left without homes, a terrifyingly high figure, considering there are only about 150,000 people living in the area.

Major earthquakes are nothing new to Turkey. A series of a dozen major quakes since 1939 have left an estimated 40,000 people dead.

All the Turkish earthquakes with the exception of the most recent at Gediz have occurred along a fault, or fracture in the earth's crust, running across the northern portion of the country in an east-west direction.

Called the Anatolian fault, Turkey's quake line is unusually similar to structural defect to California's San Andreas fault, which scientists have been saying for some time could slip in a major earthquake.

There are two basic kinds of faults — vertical faults, in which one side of the fracture slips vertically in relation to the other side, and lateral faults, in which one side slips laterally in relation to the other. Both the Anatolian fault and California's San Andreas fault are the lateral kind.

California already has had some serious quakes this century, but because of relatively sparse population patterns, the tolls have been comparatively light. The most serious California quake was in San Francisco in 1906 when 700 people were killed. In 1933, an earthquake at Long Beach took 115 lives.

The only other extremely damaging quake in the United States this century was Alaska's 1964 shock, which killed 131 people.

The most serious earthquake on record this century, in terms of human lives lost, was in 1920, when an estimated 180,000 people were killed in Kan su, China.

Some 143,000 persons lost their lives three years later in Tokyo, and in 1932 the earth rumbled again in Kan su, taking another 70,000 persons to their deaths.

MAN'S THE ANSWER

The Future: Bright Or Doomed?

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Man can have "a shining, hopeful future."

On the other hand, he may be doomed—by himself.

Whatever the future's fruit, its seeds have long since been planted deep in man's body and mind. By careful selection and cultivation he can determine what the crop will be.

It is up to him. And "the time of decision is at hand."

This is the message —the promise and the warning —of Biology and the Future of Man, just published by Oxford University Press.

The book, 936 pages long, was put together by 21 panels of life scientists recruited by the Committee of Science and Public Policy of the National Academy of Sciences. It was edited by Philip Handler, president of the Academy. No other book quite like it has ever been published before.

It brings us up to date, mostly in lay language, on what biology has learned about the origin of life, the genetic mechanics which control heredity and the function of individual cells; evolution, behavior, and the interplay of living things and their environment.

Man is the product of three billion years of evolution on earth. Only recently, however, has he begun to discover what this product is and how it works.

And only now, in the evolutionary time scale, is he beginning to glimpse the dangers and opportunities which lie in his path to the problematical future.

This book unblinkingly considers these dangers —nuclear war, uncontrolled population growth, a poisoned environment, worldwide famine —and as unblinkingly examines the toil and cost of preventing them. It also looks, though dubiously, at the possibility that men may turn themselves into supermen through manipulation of their genetic heritage.

"A future for man can be assured only when the ultimate danger of modern war is fully recognized and mankind abandons warfare."

"The upsurge in the growth of human populations constitutes the major problem for the immediate future of man."

Food production cannot keep pace with population at present growth rates. Worldwide famines and further decay of the environment are bound to result from failure to cut down on births.

The biologists agree that improved birth control methods are needed. Birth control pills, have been much denounced of late because of occasional bad side effects. The authors deplored such attacks on the pill.

"Since the death rate from such usage is clearly well below the death rate from pregnancy itself," they said, "these pills not only aford millions of families the opportunity for a richer, fuller life while checking the demographic explosion, on balance they also spare the lives of a significant number of mothers who would otherwise die of the complications of pregnancy."

Man is not only endangering his future as a species by reproducing himself without restraint; he is threatening the whole life-supporting basis of his planet by polluting its air and waters.

There are many things we think we could not live without today —soap, detergents, oil, autos, highways, various chemicals, paper, paper board, plastics.

There also are such things as rising noise levels, thermal pollution, the increasing replacement of green countryside by towns and airports and highways, soil erosion, the over fertilization of waters with the very chemicals that have increased our food production.

If all these are expanded —as growth charts indicate they will be —without consideration of their environmental effect, "the totality could constitute the saddest, most brutal, and most disastrous act of vandalism in history."

Biology has done a lot to show medicine how to attack some inheritable diseases and, by "genetic counseling," to prevent married couples from transmitting abnormalities to future generations.

There are indications that, in the long future, it may be possible to control human breeding in such a way as to produce only those types of persons judged to be admirable.

But, say the authors, "We forcefully reject the abhorrent thought of breeding subsets of humans specifically adapted to the performance of various tasks, thereby creating a highly efficient but antlike society."

Science has accomplished wonders in keeping human bodies alive. But it has accomplished little toward prolonging at the same time the functions of the human brain. The book is both candid and grim on this score.

"Biology, the science of life, has to be complemented by new insights into the biology of death," it says. "The application of such insights will intensify concern with questions which already demand answers.

"Is society justified in keeping the aged alive when those mental functions which distinguish human beings from vegetating bodies have ceased?

"Where its the limit of anguish and material burden which the relatives of such aged persons and society at large can bear, a problem which is increasing in frequency and severity?"

Although biology has come a long way toward solving some of the great mysteries of life and death, there remain "major challenges for today and tomorrow."

"If these are met with vigor and determination," say the authors, "if man's technical capabilities are utilized to the full, a shining, hopeful future lies ahead.

"If the moral imperatives are not joined to scientific understanding, if apathy, indifference, and cupidity outweigh determination, man could be defeated by his own biology.

"The time of decision is at hand."

Through A Grass Curtain: Little-Known War In Sudan

By The Toronto News Service

LONDON — Half-a-million people slaughtered in a bloody civil war.

Another half-a-million chased from their homes — and slowly wasting away from hunger in foreign lands.

Untold thousands more dying of starvation, wracked by disease and oppression in the war of independence that has gone on for 15 years.

Not Vietnam, not Cambodia, not Biafra.

This is The War Nobody Knows — the bloodthirsty racial strife between the Arab government forces and the Negro African guerrillas in Southern Sudan.

Massacres, ambushes and fear are the order of the day in the Southern Sudan, but the world doesn't want to know about it.

In London recently, a small group of Englishmen and black Africans launched a campaign to pry open the Grass Curtain and let the world see what is happening.

Director of the Southern Sudan Association, Mr. E. Mading de Garang, told me: "We want to awaken the conscience of the free world so it will investigate what is happening in the Southern Sudan.

"Eastern Europe has its iron curtain. The Sudan has its Grass Curtain, which the Arab government erected to keep news of the horror from the outside world."

Mr. de Garang, a 36-year-old Southern Sudanese, fled from the country in 1965 after being arrested for allegedly cooperating with the Anya Nya, the black guerrilla movement.

He fled in fear of his life after two massacres within three days by government troops. In one, 1,400 people died, and 80 were slain in the other.

The trouble in the Sudan goes back to 1955 when the 5 million Negroes in the South realized that Britain intended handing over the country to the 8-million Arab majority in the North.

The Negroes — all Christian or pagan — rebelled at the idea of domination by the Moslem Arab North, and the fighting has never stopped since.

The Negroes claim that prior to independence in 1956, the Arabs moved into the black South and commandeered all the jobs vacated by the departing British.

After independence, the central Arab government expelled foreign missionaries and barred foreign journalists in order (the Negroes claim) to prevent the world from finding out about the slaughter of primitive Africans.

Since the first clashes, 500,000 refugees have flown into neighboring African countries like Ethiopia, Kenya, Uganda and the Congo, seeking safety from pursuing government troops.

The fighting between guerrillas and government troops has increased in the last five years, and there has been a corresponding increase in the flight of refugees.

Mr. de Garang says: "Our figure of half-a-million refugees is a moderate estimate. And many of them are starving. The United Nations says it is supporting 180,000 but the others are living along the border of the Sudan or with tribesmen in the other countries.

"Untold thousands of the people still living in the Southern Sudan are dying of starvation and disease. I saw a TV documentary the other night, taken by someone who slipped across the border, and the sight of the mothers and children almost made me cry."

He claims that their weakened state has left them vulnerable to malaria, dysentery and other diseases.

European religious welfare groups are looking on the situation as likely to develop into Biafra disaster proportions. Many of them are pooling their resources to provide aid for refugees in neighboring countries.

One organization is running a secret operation to provide food and medical supplies to dying villagers in the Sudan, carrying the supplies across the border at night through steaming jungles. But rebel forces say it is not enough.

According to secret reports smuggled out of the Southern Sudan, there are 30,000 Arab government troops in the area to keep order.

Unruh Tells Why He Seeks Top State Job

By JESS UNRUH
Assemblyman
Written For UPI

I am running for Governor of California because I feel we must restore and expand the bright promise that California once held for her people. That promise has become an empty one under the Reagan Administration.

In the last 3 1-2 years, California not only has failed to solve its major problems; we have lost ground in the effort to find solutions.

I believe that every child in California should have an opportunity to get all the education he can absorb, not just what he and his family can afford. State government must recognize its constitutional obligation to support local schools. Public higher education must be restored to its place of national preeminence.

We live in our cities in fear. Violent crime is increasing by 20 per cent per year—more than twice as fast as when Reagan was elected almost four years ago. Our local police need real help, not law and order speeches. The state should aid local police with expanded recruitment and training programs, and see to it that the officer on the beat has the best equipment available.

Unemployment in California is 20 per cent higher than the national average. The figure is approaching 600,000 in this state. Our aerospace industry is particularly hard hit. But all Ronald Reagan does is wring his hands and say that California must go along with the Nixon Administration's record high interest policies.

That is not good enough for the governor of the nation's largest, most influential state.

Under this administration, property taxes on an average home are rising 53 per cent faster each year. The share of taxes going into the state general fund has gone down for banks and corporations by 30 per cent, but the share coming from the income tax we all pay has gone up 43 per cent. We must have genuine, equitable tax reform based on the ability to pay.

These are a few of the problems facing us—problems whose solutions we can no longer afford to postpone. The Reagan administration has ignored critical problems facing the state and has attempted to rule by pitting one group against another, and that is our state's greatest problem now.

Those now in power in Sacramento think that the spirit of the people of California has been broken. They feel that they can safely and successfully appeal to certain fears and prejudices and reap another easy election victory. They feel that by playing upon the divisions in our society, they will surely stay in power.

I believe that the people of California are ready to start putting things together and to stop tearing people apart. I believe they want a state government that attacks problems, not people. That is the alternative my candidacy offers.

We will return the government of this state to the people of this state. We will restore California to its place of national ladership and make our state truly the laboratory for the future.

We already have the talent and resources for greatness. We need the experienced leadership.

COMPETING WITH UNRUH

Mayor Yorty Criticizes Reagan Rule As Being 'Too Much Show'

By SAM YORTY
Mayor of Los Angeles
Written For UPI

I am offering my services to the people of California as a candidate for governor not in a quest for power or glory, but in the hope that my extensive experience in law, legislation, and government administration will provide constructive leadership as we move into the challenging and exciting decade of the seventies.

I believe Gov. Reagan's stewardship has been characterized by too much show and too little substance. In the field of finance, especially, his amateurish sleight of hand approach to budgeting and taxes has been detrimental to the taxpayers.

The tax relief he so naively promised during the 1966 campaign quickly turned into the largest state tax increase in our history. Reagan's emotional and stubborn refusal to recognize the need for income tax withholding not only has doomed the tax reform he promised but has forced the taxpayers to pay an additional $500 million to make up for the losses caused by lack of withholding.

The people of California have paid a high price for Reagan's lack of experience and judgment. He has now switched his position on income tax withholding but it's a little late in the game.

Directly related to the state's fiscal policy is the confusion bordering on chaos in school systems all the way from elementary to higher education.

Continued failure by the state to keep an old commitment and a Reagan campaign promise to pay at least half the cost of elementary and secondary education has forced our teachers to sponsor an initiative proposition (Prop. 8) which, if adopted, will at last force the state to assume more of the tax burden now being paid by homeowners.

A costly Los Angeles teachers' strike is a direct result of the state's failure to keep its commitment. Schools we must pay for, especially elementary schools which all children attend.

The state also has failed to use its power and resources to help solve other urban problems, whether it be in the field of youth and senior citizen affairs, of housing, welfare, health, employment, surface transportation, or economic development.

Leadership at the state level is just not there.

There are other compelling reasons for my entering the race for governor.

I believe all people of all races and creeds must be governed on the basis of equality and fairness. All levels of government and all industries have a stake in providing job opportunities for willing workers in order to include them as participants in our free enterprise system.

Recently I suggested to the governor that he appoint a state commission and give it the funds and staff to do a thorough job.

I am a life-long Democrat and Mayor Joseph Alioto (of San Francisco) and I would like to see the Democratic Party of our state divorce itself from the extreme leftists. We also need to rid our party of power seekers, the mercenaries and the arrogant would-be dictators or party bosses. To perform its Party must be a responsible, moderate party, advocating progress and enlightenment in accordance with firmly adhered to rules of ethics, fairness, and patriotism.

TERROR, DANGER

Athens' Colonels Reach Into West Germany To Beat Greeks

By TORONTO TELEGRAM NEWS SERVICE

BONN — The arm of the colonels in Athens is long — it reaches all the way to West Germany. Many of the 219,000 Greek workers here face reprisals by regime agents because they are against the Athens military government.

Their life has become a daily flirtation with the danger of being beaten and maimed — and with possible death.

Greek members of German trade unions are the main target.

The metal workers' union in Hannover recently reported a number of incidents which they called "typical of what goes on here almost daily." Some 3,000 Greeks work in Hannover, and 95 per cent of them are union members.

"We know that the Greek embassy in Bonn and the consulates are headquarters for agents who, together with some of their countrymen, terrorize Greek workers," a union official said.

He cited the most recent case of Spiriton Kardakaris as an example. The metal worker is a shop steward in an automobile plant.

Recently he and his fiancee, Kerasia Balafourti, left their house and were brutally beaten by a gang of 15 Greeks. They used metal rods and wooden clubs to inflict severe injuries — and they shouted "Communist swine" and traitor of the fatherland."

In a report to their federal headquarters, the Hannover union officials wrote: "Besides heavy bruises and broken bones, the two Greek union members had several knife wounds on their faces. The Greek woman was kicked in the stomach and beaten with heavy metal rods."

The report cited another case where union-member Wassilakis, a nephew of Kardakaris, was "spotted by a gang of 30 Greeks. He was brutally beaten and maltreated, and needed immediate hospital care."

Police and unions have no doubt that the three were victims of a Greek terror organization which — according to union leader Heinrich Menius — was smuggled into the country under the disguise of workers and the protection of the embassy and consulate to terrorize union members.

A few nights after the Kardakaris incident, two more Greeks were beaten. Vassilios Ponridis and Alexandros Brontoglou ran into a trap set for them near the Hannover railway station, as they were about to leave for a union training course.

Both were taken to hospital for treatment to cuts and bruises. Menius reported: "All victims of the terrorists have knife slashes on their faces."

Hans Berkentin, an official at the metal workers' union in Frankfurt, wrote in a recent report: "All victims are opponents of the Athens regime. The terror has been stepped up to a point where union members live in permanent fear. Night after night they barricade themselves in their homes and are not leave in their homes and dare not leave the house to take care of the most important errands. It won't take long before we will have fatal incidents."

Hannover union functionaries reported to Frankfurt: "We have identified several of the gang leaders and filed charges against them. These SS-type actions are ordered, steered and masterminded by the Greek consul general in Hannover, Atanasios Exintaris."

Asked for a comment, the consulate denied such accusations "categorically", but the trade union's legal advisor, Wilhelm Markert, said: "I have all the proof that is needed."

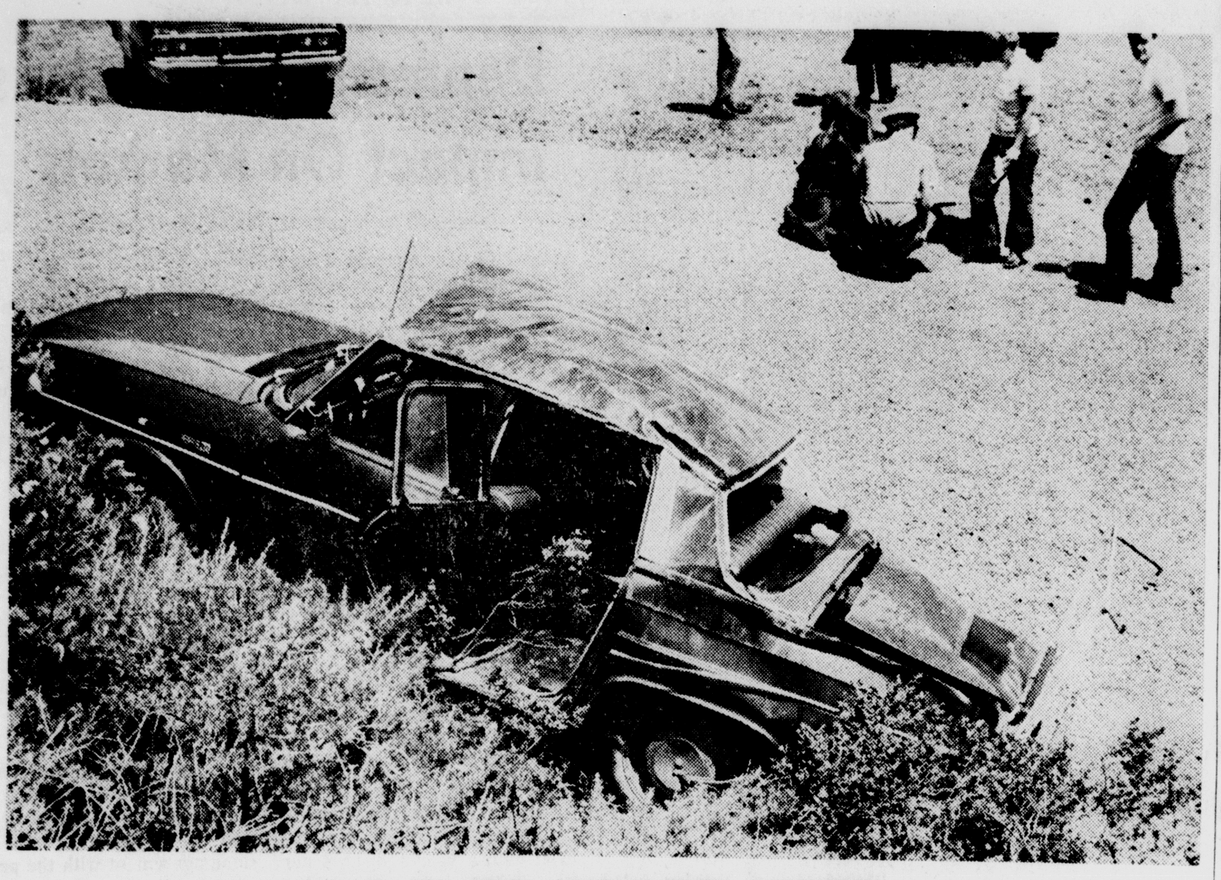

One of the latest union reports concerns Greek ship steward Leo Katsaris. He is in hospital with wounds received when a car ran him down. The driver, a Greek named Stratio Tsianti, told police it was an accident. But five witnesses declared that Tsianti purposely ran into Katsaris.

The German trade union organization DGB claims it has "hundreds of files" on pressure, terror, and threats against Greek workers in West Germany.

CAR FLIPS, DRIVER HURT

A California Highway Patrol officer (rear) takes accident report after this foreign-made car and another auto sideswiped on Highway 101 south of the Waldo Tunnel yesterday and the foreign-made auto overturned and tumbled down an embankment. The driver of the overturned car, Janet F. Baker, 26, of Glen Ellen, escaped with minor scrapes and declined medical attention. The other vehicle was operated by James W. Tiette, 23, of 109 Columbia Avenue, Mill Valley. The crash occured at 11:45 a.m. (Photo by Dave Irving)

Sleepy Hollow Eyes Private Club Issue

The Sleepy Hollow Homes Association has appointed a committee to study the pros and cons of construction of a private swimming and tennis club on the site of the Sleepy Hollow stable after a group of residents voiced concern over the project.

According to secretary Irene Wise, an audience of about 70 persons was divided Thursday on whether the club should come to Sleepy Hollow.

President Merritt A. Robinson appointed a six-member committee headed by William L. McGee to study the pros and cons of the proposal and report findings at a meeting June 18 at 8 p.m. in the clubhouse.

A group that includes Robert A. Braghetta and Webster Otis, both of Ross, has outlined plans for a club for 150 families on a 15.5-acre parcel owned by Rudolph Lang. The group has an option to buy the property.

Residents were concerned, according to Mrs. Wise, about how many cars could be parked in the area, on the size of the membership and how the project was to be financed.

The audience was also divided on its stand on the creation of Flood Control Subzone 9-A in the unincorporated areas of Ross Valley and the association decided to recommend against the project to the Ross Valley Flood Control Advisory Board, she said.

Residents favoring the project argued that the subzone was necessary to protect their property from flooding, Mrs. Wise said, while the opponents argued the subzone would result in additional taxes for the property owners who are already paying taxes for the Corte Madera Creek Project.

Bruce's Farm Adviser Cut Alarms 4-H Supporters

If the Marin farm and home advisor's posts are cut from the new county budget, all 4-H activities in the county would stop, according to 4-H supporters.

Mrs. Grace Tuck of 833 Eucalyptus Avenue, Novato, said she has started a petition drive throughout the county to save Marin's 4-H program from collapse.

Without Farm Advisor Donald Brittsan and Home Advisor Elizabeth Sandlin, the 22 4-H clubs in the county, involving a thousand youngsters and 400 adult leaders, would come to a standstill, said Mrs. Tuck.

County Administrator Alan Bruce, in a May 5 belt-tightening proposal, recommended the cutting of several departments, including the farm and home advisors.

A dozen letters of protest have been mailed to the county supervisors since then by youngsters, adults and such organizations as the Marin County Farm Bureau, Guide Dogs for the Blind and from Stanley R. Frederick of Lagunitas, president of the Marin County 4-H Leaders Council.

The salaries of both the farm and home advisors are paid by the University of California Extension Service. Marin taxpayers furnish office space and secretarial help, which this year totals $17,648.

Gene Brown, committee chairman of the Marin Farm Bureau also wrote to the supervisors urging retention of the farm advisor's office. It would not only jeopardize the 4-H program but would "cause undue hardship on the ranchers and dairymen in Marin," wrote Brown. "We need a direct connection between ourselves and the University of California research centers."

Fred L. Maynard, who is in charge of the 4-H puppy placement program at the Guide Dogs center, said the youngsters have raised more than 4,000 puppies since the program started in 1947.

Michael A. Chrystal, administrative analyst in the administrator's office, said he does not think the entire 4-H program would suddenly collapse. Much of the work in 4-H, as in other activities such as Boy Scouts and Brownies, is through volunteers, said Chrystal.

"We can't get money through the Bay Area Crusade like the other organizations," replied Mrs. Tuck, who is spearheading the petition campaign.

Marin's Luxury Hotel Rafael

It Was Rival To Del Monte

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles on early-day Marin County events, personalities and places, completed by the late Florence Donnelly, Independent-Journal historian, prior to her death.)

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

In the late 19th and early 20th centuries, San Rafael had its own challenger to the famous Hotel Del Monte in luxury accommodations for the well-to-do.

The Hotel Rafael was a most impressive edifice made all the more so by the beautiful and spacious gardens that surrounded it.

San Rafael and Marin, at the time, had a number of smaller hotels that provided comfortable facilities on a modest scale. But the Hotel Rafael was in a class by itself.

AN ARTICLE in the San Rafael Independent of Dec. 31, 1912, recalled how this grandiose project came about. William T. Coleman, owner of large tracts of land in the city, and James Mervyn Donahue, son of railroad magnate Peter Donahue, chanced to meet on a San Rafael street and began conversing about the future of their town. They were joined, first by newspaper publisher James H. Wilkins, and then by Robert Watt.

Watt revealed that he was leaving San Rafael and indicated his willingness to sell his 22 acres of holdings in the city at a bargain price.

It was Donahue who observed that the land would be ideal as the location for a hotel. And Watt then indicated his willingness to sell his property for $45,000, with $35,000 to be paid in cash and the balance in stock in any company that would build a hotel on his tract.

THE NEWS that it was to have a big hotel traveled fast in the little town, and a mass meeting was called. All the leading citizens attended and $175,000 was subscribed for the hotel company. It was Donahue who suggested the name of Hotel Rafael.

The original contract for construction of the main building was $150,000, but in order to buy the land and furnish the hotel, it was necessary to mortgage the property for $40,000.

The hotel was built where Rafael Gardens is now located.

All that remains today are the stone pillars that marked the entrance to the hotel property.

Watt, who had a large residence on the property, had already beautified the grounds with rare trees, semi-tropical shrubs and lawns.

A SPECIAL issue of the Marin County Journal in October of 1887 told of ambitious plans for the new hostelry.

The construction of the hotel was undertaken by the San Rafael Hotel Co. with capital of $200,000 and with L. H. Sweeney of Dodge, Sweeney & Co. as president; Baron John Henry von Schroeder, treasurer of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad, as vice president, and G. M. Dodge as secretary.

Directors were James Mervyn Donahue, the railroad president; William T. Coleman and Frank S. Johnson of William T. Coleman & Co.; William Bab-

IN THE LATE 19th Century and early 20th Century, San Rafael's Hotel Rafael was a popular spot for relaxation and recreation by the gentry and well-to-do. The imposing, three-story structure was made all the more impressive by the beautifully landscaped gardens that surrounded it. Luxurious accommodations and extensive recreational facilities awaited its visitors.

HOTEL RAFAEL, seen through the trees in the background, is long gone, but these stone pillars that marked the entrance to its grounds still stand today. Now they stand at the head of Rafael Drive that winds its way through the pretty residential area called Rafael Gardens that occupies the land upon which the famous hotel once stood. A few of the original trees and plantings still survive.

cock of Parrott & Co.; Robert Watt of Langley & Michaels; Sidney Smith; Henry Parker Wood of Wood and Wattles; Allan Lee, president of the San Rafael Gas Co.; Hepburn Wilkins, San Rafael lawyer, A. W. Foster of S. B. Wakefield & Co., and others.

AT THIS point, it would be well to explain the important position of Baron von Schroeder:

The baron had come to San Francisco in the 1880s and had married Mary Ellen (Mamie) Donahue, daughter of Peter Donahue, builder of a number of railroads including the San Francisco and North Pacific. Handsome and debonair, the baron was a member of a wealthy and influential German family. He had received an Iron Cross for his military services during the Franco-Prussian War, and never relinquished his German citizenship. His first wife, the former Jane Maguire, was the mother of two daughters, Janet and Edith, and a son, Henry.

Peter Donahue died Nov. 26, 1885, leaving a fortune to the baroness and to his son, James Mervyn.

THEIR AUNT was Mrs. Eleanor Martin, for many years San Francisco's famous hostess and social arbiter, although the term "aunt" was used loosely for it was Peter Donahue's second wife, the former Annie Downey, sister of California's governor, John G. Downey, who was the sister of Eleanor.

PIONEER William T. Coleman, an extensive landholder in early-day San Rafael, was one of the original founders of the San Rafael Hotel Co. that built the Hotel Rafael. He was a participant in the street corner conversation in which the idea for the hotel was born.

The hotel was designed by Curlett & Cuthbertson, San Francisco architects. A three-story structure, it was built on a slight elevation, facing south.

The Journal said that on the grounds were oak, manzanita, madrone, buckeye, laurel and other native trees of California.

According to the Journal: "The hotel building is simply a masterpiece of modern architecture. It will stand, when completed, a magnificent and imposing structure, with an observatory at one corner extending upwards 95 feet . . . has a prospective which is simply gorgeous. The design comprises a main building . . . with wings at both ends extending to the rear, thus giving the occupants the benefit of sunny apartments at all hours of the day.

"IT IS TO be broken on all fronts with tastefully constructed bays (windows), formed by projecting suites of rooms, and ornamented by graceful coverings and verandas. The main entrance will be at the southwest corner, which is fronted by a porte cochere of 20 by 30 feet dimensions, approached from several winding and beautifully designed macadamized drives and walks.

"Ascending a broad stairway and crossing an ample veranda leads into the entrance hall, 20 feet in width, on the right of which is the office with counter, register and general business departments. On the left of the hall is the private office, occupying a similar but smaller apartment.

"The main entrance hall leads first to the main corridor, a spacious and well-lighted hallway extending the entire length of the main building. . . . At the eastern end of the hall, entrance is gained to the spacious dining room, which alone covers an area of 40 by 80 feet . . . and its southern or front extremity projecting 25 feet out beyond the front line of the building, this projection having a semi-circular shape and therefore affording a magnificent view from the tables. On the east side of the dining room is a large bay 20 feet wide and 16 feet in depth, against the back of which is constructed a mammoth fireplace, sufficiently large to swallow a redwood root, and to heat the entire apartment in case of need.

"FROM THE southeast corner of the dining room opens a series of dining room suites, three in number, all of which can be thrown open by folding doors into one apartment, thus forming one grand dining room . . . these breakfast room suites can be closed if desired for privacy or family use and can be approached from both the main corridor and outer veranda.

"In the rear of the main dining room is a large pantry and serving room . . . 13 feet in width. Still back of this is the capacious kitchen and its numerous auxiliaries . . . Across the corridor in the main building, from the breakfast room suites, are three cosy sleeping apartments, for those who prefer downstairs accommodations.

Hotel Was Palace Of Broken Dreams

"Immediately in front of the main entrance and across the corridor is the entrance to the rotunda or conversation hall provided with a large fireplace. This apartment will afford the usual reading-room conveniences and comforts.

"TO THE EAST of the rotunda is the elevator, also the stairway leading up and down. The servants' dining room opens from the north of the main corridor . . . and is a commodious apartment. The west wing is also penetrated through the center of the corridor, off of which to the west and front — the outer veranda, are three very nicely arranged sleeping rooms; and on the opposite side, facing the rear of the grounds, are the ladies' billiard rooms.

"Around the entire three sides of the building extends a grand piazza, 16 feet in width, affording a picturesque promenade, unobstructed, of nearly 400 feet. On the rear of the main building is another veranda or gallery, 16 feet wide, extending from wing to wing, and leading into the rotunda, kitchen, basement apartments and rear of the grounds.

"The second floor is naturally more devoted to sleeping apartments. The entire south and west front is apportioned off into elegant suites, with plenty of rooms, parlors, closets and bathing conveniences.

"DIRECTLY OVER the porte cochere is a large circular sitting room, 31 feet in diameter, approached from the main corridor, and having such a prominent and sweeping view as to be provided with sun light all day long. This room will be one of the most delightful in the building, purely because of its magnificent advantages for scenery.

"The rear part of this floor, from the main corridor, is divided into single rooms, and in the east wing, is a large bathroom for general use. The third floor is entirely devoted to sleeping rooms. From the main corridor leading into an open apartment is a circular roof-covered arbor or open lookout from which is obtained a view of the entire surrounding country for miles, including the town of San Rafael and the bay and hills beyond.

"The favorable topography of the hotel site admits of a very pleasant and useful basement. . . . Under the main building and approached from the rear gallery above, is a commodious billiard room, 30 by 40, with bar and barber shop accompaniments. . . . Under the west wing is the card room, and adjoining are a number of apartments that can be put to any desired purpose.

"THE OBSERVATORY reaches up over the southeast corner, and will be so constructed, of course, as to grant a sweeping view of the whole country in every direction. This will be one of the grandest features of the hotel on account of the picturesque and romantic scenery in the midst of which it is situated.

"The height of the main floor is 15 feet, second floor 12 feet, and the third floor 11 feet, six inches.

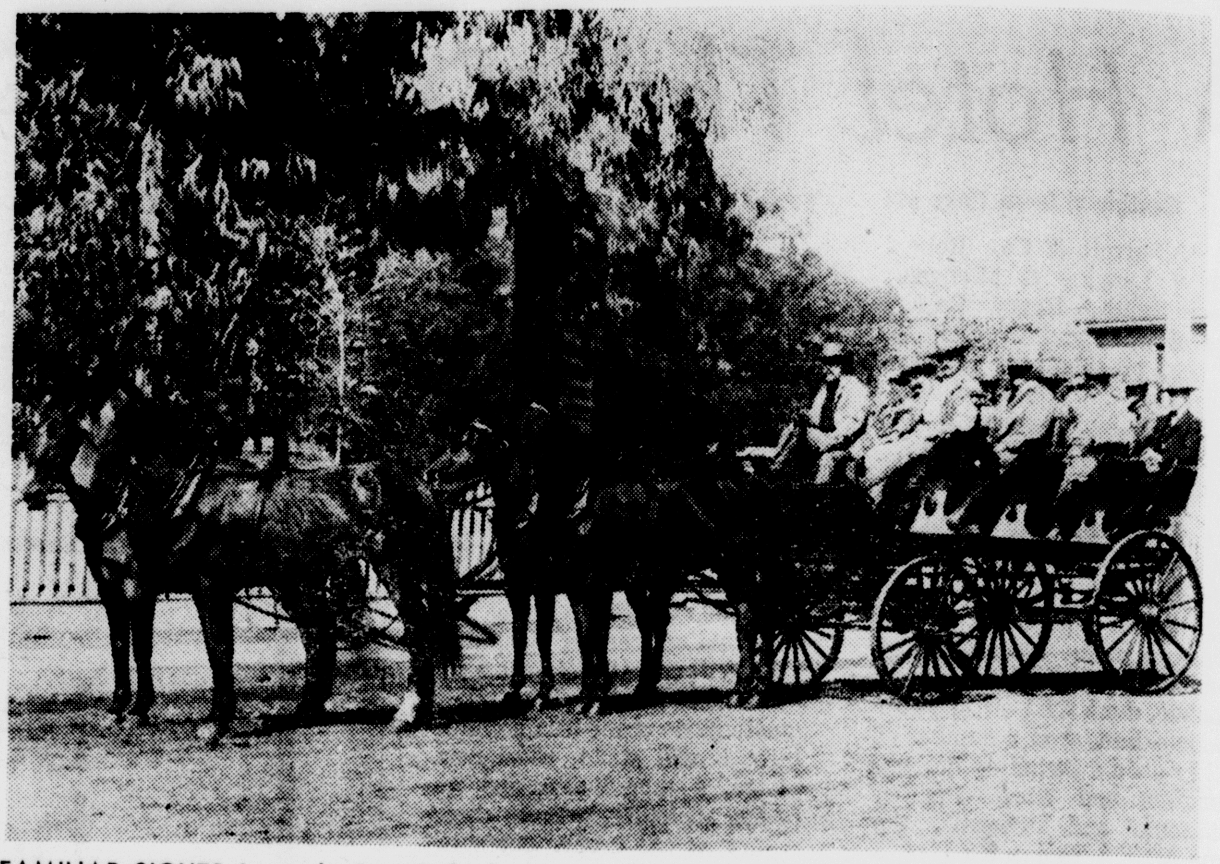

"Special attention will be devoted to the lighting of this magnificent edifice, and no device of human ingenuity best calculated for that purpose will me overlooked. The water supply likewise will be perfected, and the water used, obtained from the choicest, purest and sweetest of mountain springs.

"THE BUILDING throughout, interior and exterior, will be finished off with the most unsparing elegance, and all is native woods. The architecture is unique and picturesque, partaking of no distinctive style, but being the result of study for the highest and most pleasing architectural effects. The hotel will somewhat resemble the style of the Del Monte, also the Arcadia at Santa Monica, comprising the advantages, conveniences and beauties of both, and being inferior to neither in any respect . . .

"The improvements, contemplated in connection with the hotel, are alike elegant and complete; in thorough harmony with the grand central feature. Half a dozen cosy cottages of picturesque design and appointments all complete, nestling like dewdrops in a garden of flowers, will ornament the grounds surrounding the main structure, and bathhouses are to be erected about three-quarters of a mile away, to which it is proposed to run carriages at a trifling charge for the convenience of most guests.

"Clubhouses and bowling alleys will be established on the western side of the grounds, and lawn tennis courts, four in number, will form a feature in the southern part, surrounded by a magnificent grove of cypress, eucalyptus, manzanita and pine.

"R. ULRICH, the efficient landscape gardener, who designed and laid out the grounds surrounding the Hotel del Monte at Monterey, has already made a survey of the grounds, and they will be laid out in accordance with his designs. . . . The necessary capital has been subscribed, the site paid for, possession obtained, and the work is already well under way, and will be pushed with vigor, and in the early spring this fine hotel will be ready to open its doors to guests."

FAMILIAR SIGHTS in early San Rafael were the tally-ho coaches of the Hotel Rafael that transported guests about the peaceful countryside on summer evenings. Many a lasting romance was begun on those pleasant outings. But here Louis Hughes holds the reins during a ride with an all-male passenger complement.

From time to time the Journal reported progress on the construction of the hotel.

The paper summarized the project in this language. "Their (the founders) chief purpose is to erect a hotel that in point of grandeur, artistic design, beauty, comfort and convenience has never been equaled in California. . . . From the hotel veranda or even from the grounds the whole length of the valley on both sides, dotted by handsome villas, is visible. The view reaches from San Anselmo Junction to San Quentin Point, with the waters of San Pablo Bay, ever enlivened by steam and sailing craft, in the eastern distance. In front, on the floor of the valley, is stretched the pretty town of San Rafael, backed by the range of hills which separates San Rafael Valley from San Anselmo Valley, and above and behind which Tamalpais, the most beautiful of all our California mountains, rises majestically in its glory.

"NO ARTIST who has ever attempted it, not even Keith, has been able, in oil or water-colors, to convey more than a glimmering idea of the ever changing charm of the mountain. Photographers like Taber, feel and say that they can no more do justice to it than they can to the majestic wonders of Yosemite Valley; lithography fails with its sister branches of art, because like the face of a bright, intelligent and sprightly girl, its expression is ever changing . . ."

The hotel seemed to be destined to become all its founders had dreamed of.

The Marin County Journal in an issue of March, 1888, reported that a stockholder had said: "It is the best investment I ever made. It commenced to pay before a nail was driven."

The article added that the stockholder had claimed the building of the hotel had "advertised" the town more effectively than all other agencies except the Marin County Journal and that "many parties are applying for rooms and trying to get promises for rooms in advance."

THE JOURNAL issue of June 1, 1883, had a big headline, which said: "Opening — Hotel Rafael."

The article read: "Stockholders began to gather about 8 o'clock and were greeted by L. H. Sweeney, president. An hour or so was spent in wandering about the immense caravansary, which was lighted from basement to dome. The grand rotunda and the parlors were all pronounced as 'fine as silk.' The kitchen, with its immense ranges, shining coppers and big steam coffee pot, was inspected. About 10, in one of the breakfast rooms, the guests enjoyed an elegant collation with bottled vintages of variety. About 20 guests from out of town were registered and assigned to rooms."

On June 4, 1888, the hotel was formally opened to the public with 90 of the 101 rooms engaged for the season. From that time on Marin and San Francisco newspapers carried the names of prominent guests at the hotel and accounts of social events held there.

ELEGANT carriages with the name of Hotel Rafael painted on the sides met the trains at the San Rafael Union Depot and took guests and their luggage to the hotel.

In 1890 James Mervyn Donahue died and the Baroness von Schroeder came into possession of his stock in the hotel company. She was a gentle woman, completely under the domination of her husband, who decided on grandiose plans for enlargement and improvements of the hotel.

From the time the hotel had been opened it had been a great success. The first year took the hotel company out of debt. In two years the profits of the hotel amounted to $15,000.

The baron decided as long as the hotel was such a smashing success, it would be a great idea to own half interest in the hotel. As the stock of William T. Coleman and several others was available for purchase, the baron acquired those shares.

HE MADE additions to the hotel. A tall observation tower was built on the grounds.

Parker Wood, a past president of the Marin County Historical Society, said that before the observation tower was built there was a clubroom on the ground floor of the hotel with a shuffleboard at one side and a bar on the other.

Wood recalled that, when he was a boy, he saw the paper races, which started from the hotel and drew the elite of the town as well as guests at the hotel. There was always a big celebration at the hotel following the race.

The procedure was simple with the hounds and hares, as stylishly garbed esquestrinnes riding sidesaddle and smartly clad horsemen. The hares scattered a trail of paper when they dashed from the hotel grounds 15 minutes ahead of the hounds. The hounds tried to follow the paper trail.

A NEWSPAPER account in 1896 said: "The most interesting feature of today's paper chase was the exciting finish. Half a dozen hounds dashed through the goal within a few seconds of each other, making it difficult to determine the winner. . . . The exciting finish took place on the Fairfax road. The hares were uncaught."

May Sutton and her sisters made their athletic reputations on the hotel's tennis courts when the national women's championship was played there.

Tally-ho rides were pleasant events on the summer evenings. In the pleasure coaches the Beau Brummels had an opportunity to squire the belles and murmur endearments as they rode along the streets and roads. Then it was back to the hotel for an evening snack.

Baron von Schroeder was a gracious host at the hotel, wining and dining celebrities. He delighted in stage parties and there were other big galas when both men and women were present, but seldom the wives.

BARONESS von Schroeder preferred to stay with her children in the house her brother, James Mervyn Donahue, had owned on Petaluma Avenue (now Lincoln Avenue).

The baron was having such a good time that he turned the management of the hotel over to Gen. R. H. Warfield, who with his wife lived at the hotel.

A Dream Went Up In Smoke

An advertisement, signed R. H. Warfield & Co., proprietors, was printed in the Blue Book for the season 1896-1897. It read: "Hotel Rafael — The Society Resort, winter and summer, on the Pacific Coast. Open all the year. Fifty minutes from San Francisco. The climate is shown by statistics to be the healthiest resort on the Pacific Coast. It will give immediate relief to the worst case of asthma and seldom fails to permanently cure.

"There is no more handsome or desirable resort hotel in the United States than the Hotel Rafael with its beautiful grounds, handsome cottages, elegant drives and all forms of amusement. No finer tennis courts, bowling alleys and clubhouse can be found."

AT THE bottom of the advertisement was the notation: "The management is personally supervised by General Warfield of the California Hotel, San Francisco."

The Blue Book had a long list of guests at the hotel. Among these were: Gov. and Mrs. George Perkins, Messrs. and Mesdames Gustav Sutro, Lloyd Tevis and Mrs. Henry Shmiedell.

The late Mrs. George Boyd, writing of early Marin gardens, said: "Mr. Watt's house was moved down the hill to make room for the erection of the hotel, but the entrance drive, bordered with geraniums and pampas grass, was left intact. Later the main entrance was changed to the top of Irwin Street and the dear old rustic water tower was torn down to be replaced by the hideous observatory.

"AT THIS time there was also a maze — circular in contrast to the square planted at Del Monte."

Baron von Schroeder, with his autocratic manner, had trouble with the hotel management. He also became involved in litigation and the hotel now carried a burden of debt. Other places attracted guests.

From time to time, the hotel would be closed. On March 26, 1896, the Marin Journal stated: "The Hotel Rafael is announced to open on the 15th of April."

A small item in the Journal in August of 1915 stated: "Baron von Schroeder returned to Germany where he will command the Third Dragoons. He had the rank of major in the German army." His wife and their two daughters were already in Europe. A son remained in California.

THE JOURNAL in January of 1918 reported: "Mortgage on Hotel Rafael was foreclosed in favor of the regents of the University of California. The regents have a claim for $57,835.80. Defendants are the Von Schroeder Investment Co., Mary Ellen von Schroeder, John H. von Schroeder, California Pacific Title Insurance Co., et al."

The hotel was alien property during World War I. W. C. Jurgens of the Hotel Oakland took a 10-year lease with option to buy. In 1921 Jurgens renovated the hotel and reopened it amid a fanfare of publicity.

He advertised: "The Hotel Rafael, situated in the residence section of San Rafael, yet within easy walking distance of the business center and the depots, is opened year round, has 200 rooms and is operated on the European plan.

"EVERY ROOM is an outside room, overlooking beautiful gardens and wooded estate owned by the hotel with glimpses of the bay, mountains and valleys through the foliage. The service offered is that expected in a hotel of character and refinement the needs and wants of the guests being ever uppermost in the minds of the management." Beneath the ad was a large picture of the hotel.

The advertisement added: "At the Hotel Rafael will be found guests from every part of the world, while many San Francisco people are becoming permanent residents, so as to have year-'round enjoyment of scenery, climate and service. Wonderful gardens surround the hotel and shaded walks and cozy nooks invite the guests to enjoy the delightful climate to the utmost.

"THE HOTEL Rafael through its own efforts and in connection with other organizations offers recreation for every day of the year, horseback riding, fishing, bathing yachting, tennis and golf are provided while scenic trips to all the delightful points in Marin County are arranged by the management.

"A complete automobile touring bureau is maintained for the information of the guests. An efficient garage service is also provided. The visitor to San Rafael is always assured the best of hotel accommodations here and the Hotel Rafael has done much to make San Rafael the starting point when 'Seeing Marin County'."

The automobile did bring many visitors to Marin and some stayed for a short time at the hotel. However, the automobile visitors did not remain in one place long, as the management of Hotel Rafael and other hotel owners throughout the state discovered. Guests no longer stayed at Hotel Rafael for an entire season as they had before transportation became so easy.

THE PEOPLE of San Rafael were loyal. They gave dinner parties at the hotel but there were not so many formal balls as there had been in earlier years. Service clubs still held their luncheon meetings in the elegant dining room.

Jurgens sub-leased the hotel several times, each lessee hoping to bring the hotel back to glamor years.

Then it happened! On July 29, 1923, a Sunday, at 12:25 p.m., Chief Dan Schneider of the San Rafael Fire Department received the call that the Hotel Rafael was on fire. He and his men rushed to the scene. The huge edifice was ablaze, the fire evidently had been smoldering on the top floor before it burnt through the attic to the roof. The guests, 150 of them, were evacuated with no loss of life.

Rescued from the top floor were a fireman and two hotel employees who had been trapped there. The trio was brought down by long ladders.

AS THERE was no chance of saving the hotel building, the firemen concentrated on preventing or extinguishing other blazes which started from flying sparks. The residences of Miss Ella Cane and A. J. Brown on Lincoln Avenue, as well as several garages and sheds, caught fire. The old Pope fire engine with its crew of firemen was sent to battle these blazes.

The chief and his other firemen also fought desperately to control flames which had spread to the trees and dry shrubs on the hotel grounds.

In two hours the beautiful Hotel Rafael was a pile of embers. Many of the guests lost jewels and other precious belongings in the fire but were thankful they had escaped with their lives. If the fire had been at night there would probably have been a terrible holocaust.

JURGENS, after the fire, said the $125,000 insurance he had on the hotel would more than pay the University of California what was owed to it and that he would be in full control of the valuable tract of land in the choice residential section of San Rafael.

An arson squad investigated and obtained a confession from a man, probably a disgruntled hotel employee, that he had stolen kerosene from the kitchen and sneaked up the back stairs to the top floor, where he sprinkled the flammable liquid and touched off the blaze.

Thus was the sad end to the palace of broken dreams in which the original investors had lost all the money they had put into the hotel that they planned as a rival of Del Monte and which held that exalted status for a time.

THE TOWN OF San Rafael was jolted on a quiet Sunday afternoon — July 29, 1928 — by the sound of the fire alarm. The Hotel Rafael, pride and joy of the community, despite its financial difficulties, had been set ablaze by an arsonist. Firemen are shown battling the flames. But their efforts were in vain, and the showplace hotel was left a heap of embers and charred ruins.

MARIN CLEANERS Phone 454-4792 — Member N.I.D. of San Rafael, Bel Aire & Fairfax

"Where Did The Spots On My Dress Come From?"

You mention that you did not have spots on your dress until after it came from the cleaner's. First, let me assure you that the drycleaner did not spot your dress. Laboratory analysis indicates that the spots resulted from splashes of salad oil which, though not visable at the time, had aged to the degree that it became almost impossible to remove. The peculiar properties of oxidized oil stains make them easy to identify, so we could pin this cause down. Age or heat from pressing will set the stains and the spots which you could not see before, become visable.

The best preventive is to take a garment to your drycleaner immediately after spillage. Point out the area spotted and tell him what the spilled substance was. To let it remain too long or to apply heat to it, makes such a stain almost impossible to remove.

The Jazz Crowds Head For Gatsby's

Sausalito Club Going Strong

Jazz fans used to pour across the bridges into San Francisco to hear the great music being played in the clubs and halls of that city.

But San Francisco's famous jazz spots are no more. Only a handful have survived. And those that still exist are likely to be there today, but gone tomorrow. The music on any given weekend is quite possibly not jazz at all, but rock, or the blues, or country western. And the prices are inflated.

Under those conditions, it is not surprising that the traffic has been reversed.

NOW MANY San Franciscans are crossing the Golden Gate Bridge northbound, headed for Marin and music.

A principal reason for this movement is Gatsby's, a comfortable, homey, after-supper club on Sausalito's Caledonia Street that blends good music and sound management into the kind of place that many jazz fans feared was becoming a thing of the past.

At Gatsby's, for instance, the relaxed audience might listen to the distinctive, ear-pleasing piano playing of a gifted and attractive young lady named Jeannie Hoffman, her keyboard finesse backed up by the bass of Nat Johnson and the drums of Al Pimentel.

THEIR LISTENERS are not all San Francisco jazz buffs by any means. Marinites have discovered this unique place in their home county. So have tourists who have come to the Bay Area from afar, expecting to find the kind of jazz for which San Francisco was once renowned — and finding rock instead. Fellow buffs have directed them to Sausalito. There they find music that is considerably more than simply jazz.

"We're in the communications business," Jean Hoffman will insist during a brief lull in her music. "Music is a very powerful communications force — and we've learned how to use it."

Adds Pimentel, who is also the group's business manager: "And what's equally important is the fact that we entertain people at the same time."

BASS PLAYER Nat Johnson, who is also the Sausalito School Board president, chimes in:

"These elements are combined with the fact that we mix with the people in an effort to really effect change.

"Do you know that almost every evening someone tells me I'm the first black person they've ever talked with? It's astonishing! Yet, we see it as a beginning, and it does initiate change."

JEANNIE HOFFMAN is at the piano singing and all is relaxed with the patrons of Gatsby's, the comfortable Sausalito after-supper club on Caledonia Street that has acquired an enviable reputation among lovers of good music and appreciators of reasonable prices. The "pop" wall decor changes frequently. But the atmosphere remains distinctively and uniquely Gatsby's own.

THE POPULARITY of Gatsby's while the Jean Hoffman Trio holds forth is testimony to the authenticity of their formula. But the musicians willingly share the credit with a management that has offered them a year-long opportunity to develop their own special thing, and which has provided the conditions in which their kind of music flourishes.

That business leadership is provided by partners Charles Peet of Sausalito, Peter Sheehan of Mill Valley and Frazier Woffard of Mill Valley.

Peet and Sheehan took over the club two and a half years ago at a time when the place was not exactly financially stable. Woffard joined them as a working partner.

SHEEHAN IS an executive with a machine manufacturing firm. Peet's background was in real estate and restaurant chains.

"Neither of us had ever been in this kind of business before," says Peet, "which must have been all to good. I guess we just didn't know that you were supposed to cheat and squeeze the last dollar out of the customers, as so many clubs do today."

So instead they adopted a policy of quality entertainment of a wholesome kind appealing to a broad spectrum of ages — and at reasonable prices.

There is no cover charge at Gatsby's. A beer sells for 75 cents, a good mixed drink — "not a North Beach halfshot" — for $1. And customers are not pressured to hurry on to the next drink.

"WE HAVE found that if you treat people right, they'll leave their television sets and come out and listen to good, live music," Peet says. "And they'll come back for more.

"That is what killed so many jazz clubs in San Francisco — the greed for the dollar. People couldn't be comfortable and enjoy themselves under those circumstances."

GATSBY'S IS strictly a bar, serving no food. Open seven nights a week with a 9 p.m. starting time for the music, except on Sunday when it begins at 4:40 p.m., the club remains open until 2 a.m. nightly.

Peet gives high marks to Al Jarreau among the factors in the club's success. He was their opening entertainer and proved an excellent draw. In and out of jazz, they've also had such attractions as Bobby Shane, the New Kingston Trio and John Stewart.

THE HOFFMAN Trio has been firmly established as the Gatsby attraction now for a year, but Jack Sheldon joined the lineup recently, performing on Sundays and Mondays.

Peet describes Jeannie Hoffman's music as "a happy sound" and says their long run at Gatsby's has enabled the trio "to polish what is a unique style. We benefit, just as they have."

"We consider Gatsby's our living room," says Nat Johnson, "And we consider the people who come there our guests. We treat them that way."

"YOU KNOW — it's an interesting thing," adds Pimentel, "that jazz was killed by jazz musicians. They were a bunch of effete snobs who had utter contempt for their audiences. And their audiences paid them back in kind. Oh, guys like Miles Davis could get away with it, but most musicians played down to the people, and developed a form so complicated it became a case of musicians playing for musicians.

"The eras of Dixieland and Swing weren't like that. Musicians then were playing strictly for the enjoyment of the people. Musicians then were also human beings with whom the public could identify. For those reasons, musicians in the old days were more than amply rewarded, both financially and artistically."

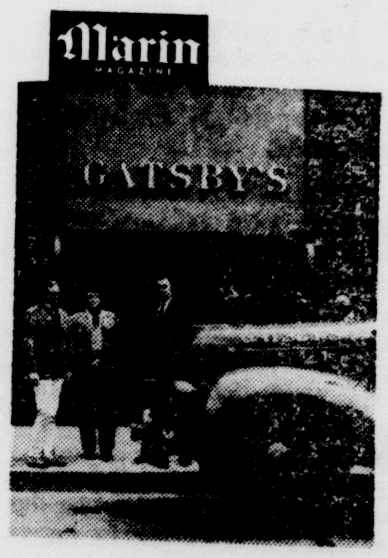

"That's what we are recreating" Jean joins in, "and as you can see — it's working. We play the music of the 1970s. We're not really jazz or rock musicians. We're actually more pop oriented."

"ROCK BECAME popular," echoed Nat Johnson, "because it is relatively simple, and it was played by people for the people. Rock musicians know their audiences, and they know how to communicate with them. Rock fans can really say, 'I know what you mean!' "

Jean Hoffman is not exactly the newest kid on the Sausalito block. Nor is she new to the world of music. She's a young, slim and pretty lady who has been playing piano since she was 3 years old.

"Playing in a club is like

WHEN partners, left to right, Charles Peet, Frazier Woffard and Peter Sheehan, all Marinites, took over the ownership and management of Gatsby's club in Sausalito two and a half year ago, the establishment's prospects were not bright. But under their guidance and their policy of good music and reasonable prices, the place has glourished. The vehicle shown in the photograph is the old Sausalito fire truck that serves Gatsby's as its mobile signboard.

practicing five hours a night," she says "and while I won't reveal my age, I can tell you that I have plenty of practice behind me!"

HER IMPLICATION is that if a brain surgeon practiced that long, and that often, he'd be the greatest brain surgeon in the world — even with no talent.

"Actually," says Pimentel, "Jean is an important stylist — in the same sense that Oscar Peterson, George Shearing and Fats Waller were stylists. She's unique."

ONE OF THE many unique — and interesting — things about the group is that money is not one of their final objectives. Neither is celebrity status. They have had both. And they've been without both. And they claim there is little difference in their mental attitudes in both circumstances.

They played, and wrote music for, the motion picture "Bullet."

"All that happened," says Johnson, "is that people come up to me and say, 'Hey! I saw you in a movie!' There must be more to life than that!"

"OUR GOALS aren't completely defined," adds Pimentel. "However, if I were required to verbalize them, I'd have to say that our primary goal is to consistently improve our product in an effort to entertain people; and our secondary goal is to effect change."

Their secondary goal is a pretty big ambition. Yet Nat Johnson maintains that people must have big ambitions — particularly in an effort to effect change for the better in people relationships.

"I believe everyone," he says, "white and black and in-between, has a responsibility to effect change. My particular emphasis is on race relations and on the problems of kids. I'm education-oriented. I like kids, I'm a musician and I'm black. Whatever I can contribute as a power source to effect change — no matter how small — will receive my full attention."

HE OFFERS one simple example:

"Gatsby's is home for me. I'm accepted there as a person. First because I'm a musician, and secondly because Sausalito provides a more tolerant atmosphere than many other parts of the state.

"The movie 'Easy Rider'," he points out, "could have been made authentically in many California towns. Did you know that?"

"WELL," NAT continues, "being accepted at Gatsby's makes it easy for me to talk to customers. Many times I'm the first black man to shake their hands. And if they only learn one lesson — that the only difference is our color — than I'm effecting change: In people and in their attitudes toward blacks. I believe that's important. Don't you?"

Nat confesses to two hobbies: "I'm a sailing freak and a golf freak."

In addition to playing five nights a week at Gatsby's, he carries 16 units at San Francisco State toward his anthropology degree, spends five to eight hours a week in his work as president of the Sausalito School Board, and devotes his spare time to his children, Michael, 8, and Wanda, 9.

NAT IS A busy man.

He plays guitar as well as bass. He is self-taught on both instruments, although he admits to picking up technical tricks and musical know-how from the many nationally famous names with whom he's played — Bolo Sete, Zoot Simms, and Lambert, Hendricks and Ross included.

Pimentel is also self-taught, and while he already owned the talent, he learned his skills on the job.

JEAN HAS more formal training, (at Juilliard) which shines through her up-beat fugues, making Bach rock like an orthodox teeny-bopper.

"We can 'read' a room now," Jeannie exclaims. "We can feel what the customers want to hear. Sometimes the mood of the room demands loud excitement; sometimes not. After a year in Gatsby's, we can read that room so accurately that it's uncanny!"

"We have no planned repertoire for a set," she adds. "When we sit down to play we talk over each tune until we all agree that it's right for the mood, the time of evening and the audience. When we all agree, we hit it spontaneously. — that's the excitement of it. Our arrangements aren't tight. We experiment. We aren't afraid of taking a chance.

"ONE NIGHT a tune might be a bass solo, the next night the piano may carry the load, and on another occasion the drums may dominate — if that's what we feel.

"On the other hand we might just sing — me alone — or all three of us. Spontaneity breeds the magic. That's what we try to provide."

"Sometimes you're the star of a certain song," says Johnson, "and the next time it's played, you might be in somebody else's movie."

"AND THAT'S the reason," adds Pimentel, "that we prefer to record in the club. It's too difficult to generate that spontaneity, that excitement and that enthusiasm in a studio."

"Ninety per cent of the time," he continues, "the group is super-great. Five per cent of the time we're superior. We only turn in an average performance five per cent of the time. That comes from working together like a fine machine."

Asked where they were going in their careers, Jeannie answered, "Well, we like it here, and we intend to stay. Naturally, we want the whole bag — television, movies, records, travel. And all those things will come because our product is there. When those things do come, we'll be able to communicate our message to a broader base of people. That's what we look forward to doing. But Marin — and Sausalito — will always be home."

JACK SHELDON'S record is equally impressive. He has played the trumpet for years as a single and also with large bands such as Benny Goodman, Henry Mancini and Les Brown. Peet related that many admiring musicians who have come in to Gatsby's to hear Jack on the trumpet claim that "he makes that horn sing like nobody else in the business."

Sheldon recently took to the piano and has developed a most appealing sound, accompanied by bass guitar and drums. He played a two week engagement at Gatsby's last month and so thoroughly enjoyed it he decided he'd make it a regular thing — thus his present engagement.

Many locals first heard Sheldon a few years ago when he played in Sausalito and became a favorite with many, due to his "wild" spontaneous humor. He offers a fine variety of entertainment and you can expect almost anything from him on Sundays and Mondays at Gatsby's.

Peet says: "We have a room entertainers really like to work. It's intimate, the sound equipment is the finest made and our audiences are very responsive. All of these things helped us turn the finances around, so that Gatsby's is a highly successful enterprise.

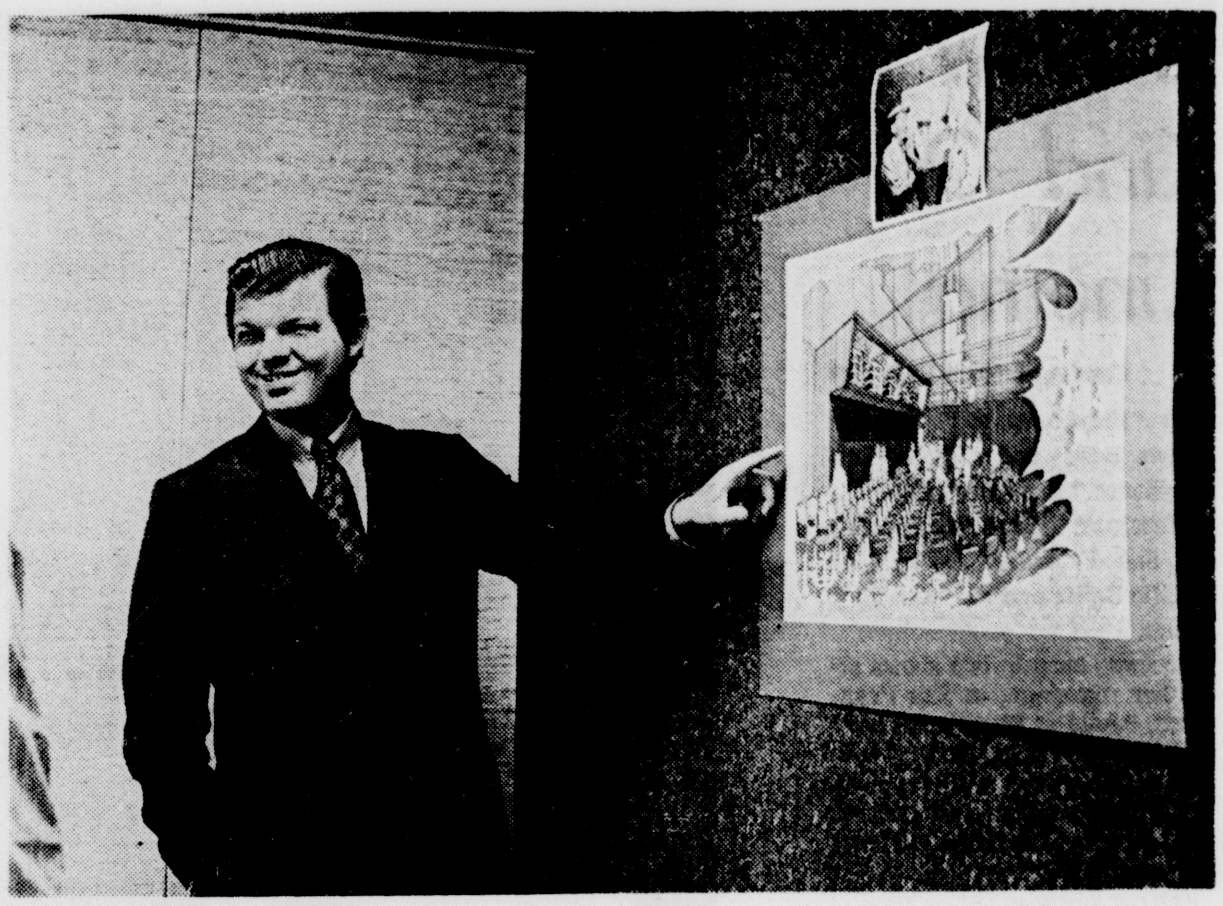

"To give you some idea of the crowd we draw, I can point out that we sell far more Irish coffees than beer. And we have as many customers from Piedmont and Atherton as we do from Marin."

Sausalito's new entertainment baby — a merry mix of music and management — continues to grow big, strong and happy.

Marin Couple Help Create A New Entertainment Idea

A PROUD Charles Patterson shows off a sketch of the new Theater Atop Ghirardelli Square in San Francisco where next week the "San Francisco Experience," product of a new cinematic technique, the Electrovision Process, will make its debut. Patterson, of Belvedere, is Electrovision vice president and "San Francisco Experience" general manager.

By profession, Belvedere's Charles Patterson is a general business and California tax attorney.

Which would seem unlikely to involve him in the bringing of a "new dimensional" form of cinematic entertainment to the Bay Area.

But Patterson's hobby is "ideas." And friends, knowing this, are not at all surprised that he is currently concerned with what he feels to be a revolutionary new entertainment vehicle entitled "San Francisco Experience."

IT DEBUTS Friday in the specially-designed Theater Atop Ghirardelli Square on the San Francisco waterfront.

The boyish-looking Patterson, in his mid-30s, is the vice president and secretary of Electrovision Productions Inc. which is the parent and producing company of the Electrovision Process, and is co-venturer with California business and conservation leaders Carl R. and Leah McConnell in "San Francisco Experience" and its general manager.

Electrovision Process, used in the production of "San Francisco Experience," has been described by its developers as "the first major breakthrough in entertainment since the advent of talking motion pictures."

PLANS ARE for Electrovision Productions to produce similar "Experiences" in other cities throughout the United States and abroad. Patterson is now surveying those possibilities while at the same time conducting his own law practice.

His entry into the entertainment world began for Charles Patterson on a Friday night in 1966 when, after a meeting on San Francisco's Fisherman's Wharf, he passed the empty Wharf Theater on Jefferson Street.

"At 3 a.m., that same night, I awakened my wife and told her I wanted to open a motion picture house in the empty Wharf Theater and show old documentary films of San Francisco to share some of the history and excitement of the San Francisco Bay Area with visitors."

ONE WEEK later the Wharf Theater opened. It ran for four years, with "Inside Alcatraz" proving the most popular presentation, attracting thousands of residents as well as visitors.

In 1967, Patterson read about the multi-vision, multi-sensory exhibit at the Montreal Expo '67.

"I couldn't sleep for an entire week, thinking about his new technique. I also was aware that while people travel more today they spend less time in one place, and that it is frustrating to visit a city and not be able to see and know everything about it," Patterson recalls.

"AND, I have always contended that everybody loves two cities, their own and San Francisco," he adds with a smile.

"My idea was to create a medium through which residents and visitors, alike, could become acquainted with San Francisco and the Bay Area in a very short perior of time and through which I could show and share the city and the Bay Area by using the latest techniques of communication. My hope was that the Expo '67 presentation could be adapted to pure entertainment."

The enthusiastic young lawyer pursued his investigations, but found that traditional motion picture exhibitors were turned off by anything so experimental.

AS CIRCUMSTANCE would have it, he broached his idea to his father-in-law, David M. Sacks, just recently retired American Broadcasting Co. vice president and then general manager of KGO Television. Sacks was long recognized not only as an intuitive and talented administrator but as an innovator as well in the field of television and entertainment.

Sacks, perceiving the great possibilities and "chomping the bit" for new challenges, immediately began working with his son-in-law and the two found an imaginative and daring film production company in New York City that had already begun working and experimenting in multi-vision techniques.

The belief of Patterson and Sacks in their project was given a tremendous boost when, during casual conversation with Bing and Kathy Crosby, they found those two thought the idea so great they immediately became active participants.

BING CROSBY and his business manager and executive producer Basil Grillo joined Patterson and Sacks in forming Electrovision Productions Inc.

Production of "San Francisco Experience" was begun in early 1970.

No one would ever doubt, however, that behind Charles Patterson's single-minded, intense pursuit of his Electrovision dream are the encouragement and enthusiasm of his attractive wife Judith.

And one might suspect that Judith's excitement over the enterprise might stem from her own brief, but successful, career as an actress.

A NATIVE of Brooklyn, but California reared, Judith attended the University of California at Los Angeles where she was a theater major, During that time she was also a working actress with "Playhouse 90," "Father Knows Best" and radio's "Lux Playhouse." She also has been a professional ballet dancer with the San Francisco Ballet, the Pacific Ballet and the New York Ballet.

She was even in two shows after her marriage, in San Francisco, "Judy at Santa's Village" and the "Our Gang Show," during which time she received 30,000 letters from viewers in one month, probably a Bay Area record!

Chuck Patterson, originally from San Bernardino, graduated with a degree in business from UCLA in 1953 and served four years in the U.S. Air Force as a bombardier-navigator in England after having been an honor cadet in the aviation program. Upon his return to Southern California, he found himself bored with a job as a branch manager and sales representative for a calculator firm and decided to attend law school, graduating at age 31.

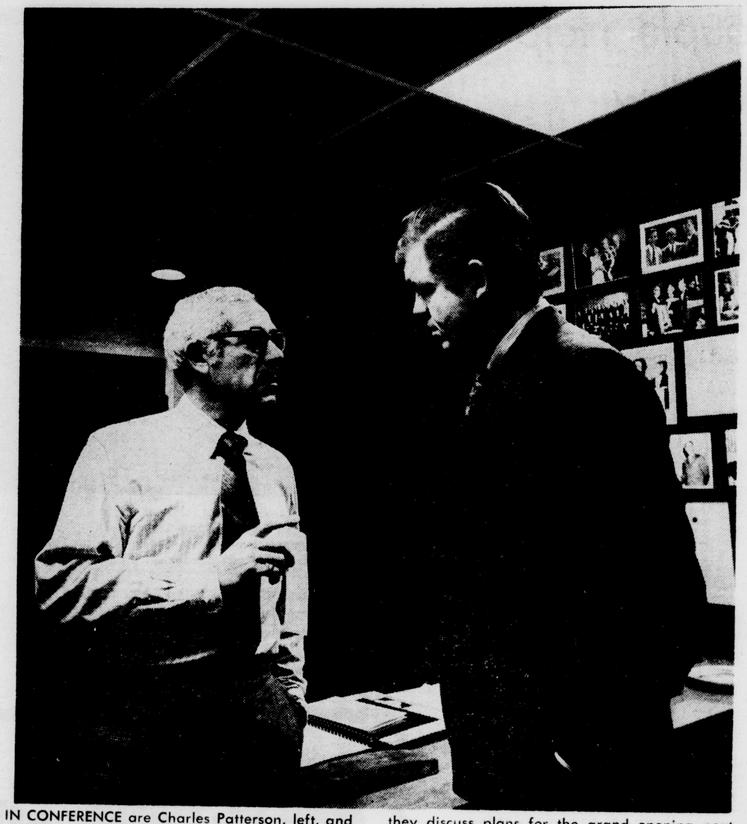

INDEED, HIS entry into Hastings Law School in San Francisco was with the same last-minute breathlessness that marked his entry into the entertainment field. He arrived two weeks late and found himself in class one hour after registration.

The couple have been married now for 10 years and have lived for six of them at 20 Peninsula Road in Belvedere.

Having always worked closely in all of their projects because "they creatively stimulate each other," their work-a-day life is a long and active one.

Morning begins at 6 a.m. for the Pattersons, as the children, Craig, 8, David, 5, and Rebecca, 3, are fed and the two oldest packed off to school.

By 7:30 a.m., the two of them are on the way to their office where Judith is now acting as a part-time legal secretary for her husband while doubling as coordinator for Electrovision Productions. Because of her background and experience, Judith also works very closely with her husband and father as a creative consultant to the "San Francisco Experience" production house.

ALTHOUGH they have a very heavy schedule, Judith and Chuck make it a point to be home by 7:30 p.m. to play with the children and put them to bed.

"Our schedule would never be possible if it weren't for Janet McCauley, a young girl from Scotland living with us now who came here to see and learn about America," Judith explains.

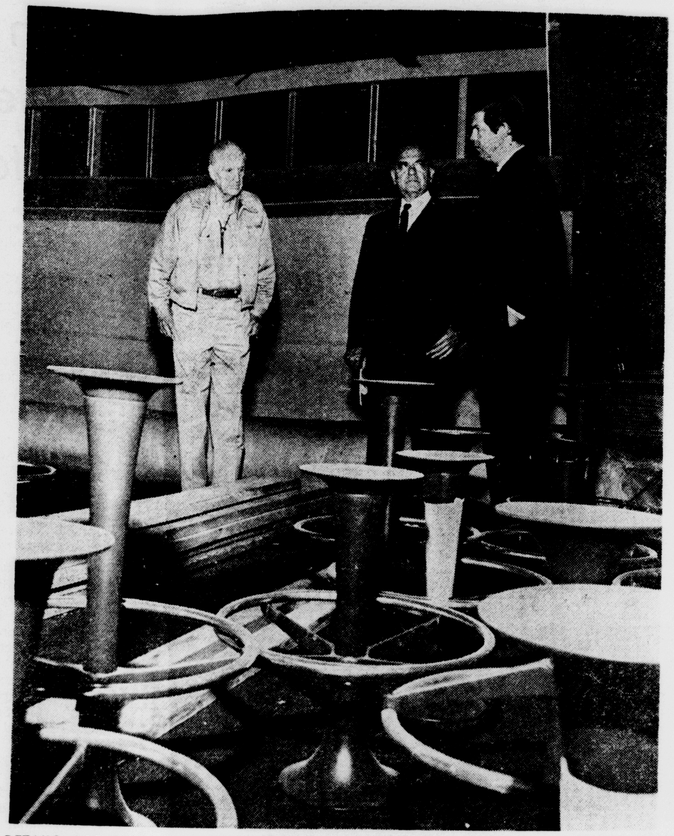

Evenings alone are spent reviewing the day, reading and mulling over new ideas.

WHENEVER time permits, the couple go to the theater, of which they are enthusiastic followers. Other times they enjoy television.

Weekends, however, are reserved for the children, with boating on the lagoon (Chuck is a former member of the board of directors of the Belvedere Sailing Club and a former captain of the Lido Fleet), motoring through the Napa Valley, or taking longer trips when everybody's schedule permits.

But Saturdays and Sundays have their routine, too. Chuck is manager of the Little League Belvedere Mustangs baseball team and Judith is a Cub Scout den mother and teaches Sunday School at the Christian Science Church of Belvedere.

ENTERTAINING informally also is part of the Patterson way-of-life and their home May through October, is literally an open house for friends. And there is a Brittany spaniel by the name of Muffin to contend with, as well.

As if Charles Patterson did not have enough to occupy him, he also is active in a number of community activities. He is a director of the South Marin Boys Club; a former member of the board of trustees of the Reed School District; an immediate past president of the San Francisco Annex, a non-profit organization offering fund-raising services for other groups; and a past president of the San Francisco Chapter of the National Aid to the Visually-Handicapped.

The pressure is on both Chuck and Judith, and all the people involved in the "San Francisco Experience," at the moment, for their's is the very first presentation of the Electrovision Process devoted solely to pure entertainment, and every aspect down to the smallest detail must be carefully controlled.

FOR INSTANCE, there was the matter of constructing a specially-designed theater to hold some 250 custom, contour swivel chairs; and the installing of a unique convoluted screen which curves 180 degrees and which is two and a half times the size of Cinerama.

There was the placement of a four-track stereo sound system which surrounds the audience; the synchronization of some 30 projectors flashing thousands of images and colors. And, there are the special effects, some of which are so new as still to be considered experimental.

The sum total is to completely involve and engulf the audience in the mood, the "feeling," the tempo and the history, past and present, of San Francisco and the Bay Area . . . including many of the great natural splendors of Northern California . . . all within 30 minutes.

"THE WHOLE idea of 'San Francisco Experience' is to complement, not substitute for, the touring of the Bay Area and we feel certain it will make any visit here that much more meaningful," Patterson declares.

He also points out that "all Bay Area residents will find the unique show of interest. It will focus on the need to protect and preserve our historical sites and natural beauties which are our heritage."

Underlying this great new adventure of the Pattersons are two very basic characteristics of personality which both Chuck and Judith share.

First, they have a continuing love affair with the San Francisco Bay Area, "as do most residents who adopt this area as their homes."

And, secondly, they respond to almost everything and almost everyone around them with a child-like, almost naive, wonder and enthusiasm that leave no room for doubt or boredom. Which is what they believe "San Francisco Experience" will do for those who see it.

AT THE OFFICE in San Francisco, above, or at home in Belvedere, at right, "San Francisco Experience" and Electrovision details now occupy much of the time of Charles and Judith Patterson.

Old Castles, Irish Mist And Moors

Those Are Attractions Of Historic County Offaly

Old castles, like whiskey, become more intriguing with age. And in Ireland's central plain region, you can find both in a one-day visit.

Of the more than two million Americans who will be visiting Ireland during the 1970 tourist season, the history buffs will want to visit the picturesque village of Tullamore, located about 60 miles west of Dublin in the center of County Offaly.

In and around Tullamore is an array of fine old castles and other ancient works dating to the 6th Century.

THE TOWN itself offers several interesting excursions, like that to Durrow Abbey, with Columcille's Cross and Well, and to the ruins of Rahan Abbey, founded in the 6th Century by St. Carthage.

Remnants of two Romanesque churches of the 12th Century are also to be seen in Tullamore, one with a remarkable chancel arch with sculptured heads, and a beautifully ornamented round window.

The town has a number of fine 16th Century houses, and nearby is the castle of Carbury, built in the same period by Pierce de Bermingham.

TULLAMORE also boasts the country's oldest distillery, which makes Irish Mist Liqueur, based on Irish whiskey and heather honey from a recipe nearly 1,000 years old. It's the original "heather wine" referred to by Irish poets in the Middle Ages.

MANY OF Ireland's famous tales and legends have had their settings in the Tullamore area, mainly because of the misty moors which dominate the landscape. The moors are both beautiful and treacherous. Stories are still told of entire companies of soldiers entering the moors, never to be heard of again.

Driving east from Tullamore about 25 miles is the town of Athlone, situated on the River Shannon, just below Lough (Lake) Ree. Athlone is famed for the heroic defense of its bridge against King William's army in 1691.

Of interest in Athlone are the modern Church of SS. Peter and Paul, in the Roman Renaissance style, and the 13th Century King John's castle.

VISITORS WITH Irish blood will probably want to make the 13-mile trip south of Athlone to Clonmacnoise, to see the ruins of the monastic settlement which St. Kieran founded in 529 A.D. Clonmacnoise is considered one of the holy places of Ireland, and for centuries was the favored burial place for kings and princes.

There are seven churches at Clonmacnoise, dating from different periods and in various stages of preservation. One of these, the Great Church, is an impressive relic built in the 10th Century and rebuilt in the 15th Century.

It has a monolithic cross 15 feet high, commemorating its founders, King Flann and the Abbot Colman, and a number of sculptures depicting, among other things, the founding of Clonmacnoise by St. Kieran.

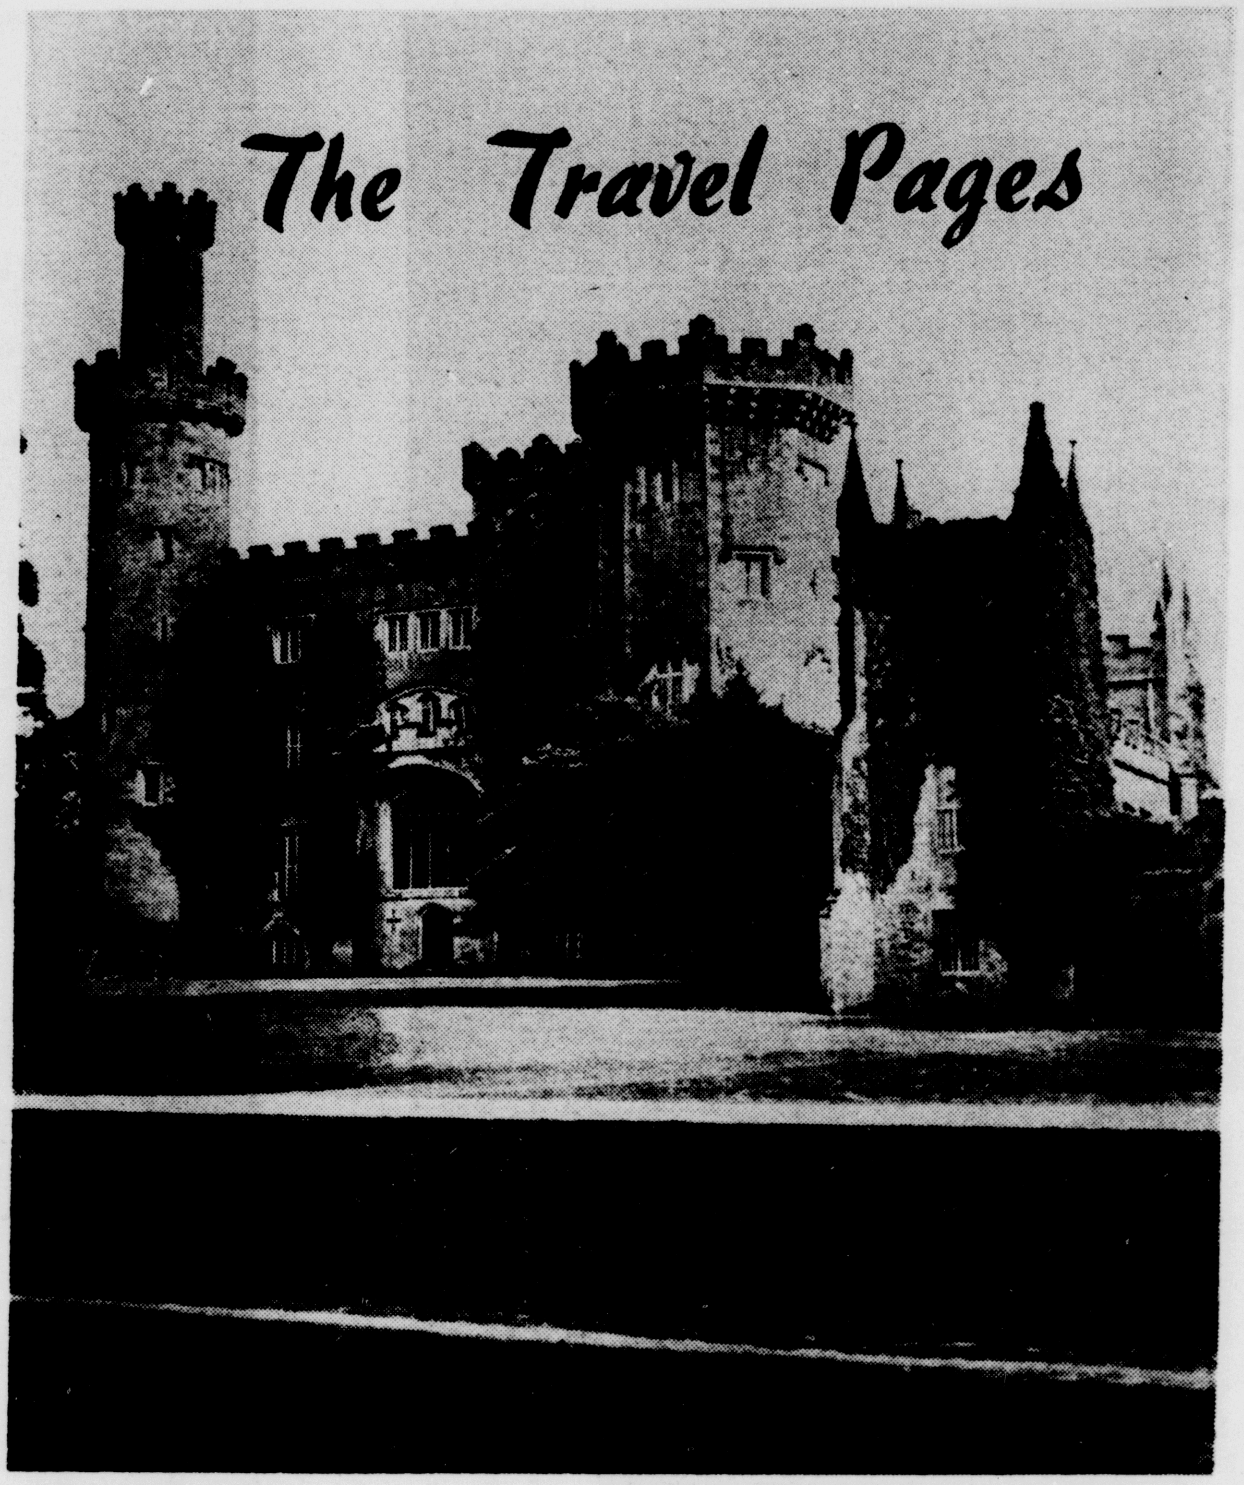

Each year, on Sept. 9, Clonmacnoise becomes the goal of a pilgrimage for Irishmen from all over the country, who make the annual trip in celebration of the Feast of St. Kieran.

Accept Money Card

Sixty-five hotels in the Anchor group and 31 in the Swallow group, all in Great Britain, now accept the American Express Money Card.

British Are Coming

More and more British people are visiting the USA, with 300,000 expected this year, some 60 per cent of them tourists.

AMONG THE MANY well preserved remnants of Ireland's colorful past that can be seen by tourists in and around the town of Tullamore, County Offaly, is Charleville Castle.

A WALK INTO the 6th Century awaits the tourist who passes through this doorway to the monastic settlement of Clonmacnoise in Ireland's County Offaly. Founded by St. Kieran in 529 A.D., it is one of Ireland's oldest holy places. For centuries it was the favored burial place of Irish kings and princes. And it is the scene of an annual Irish pilgrimage.

HILO DOES HAVE RAIN

It's true. Hilo, Hawaii, had a bit of rain during 1969.

In fact it was the wettest year on record, according to rainfall statistics kept at Hilo Airport since 1941.

But while bare statistics of 173.23 inches of rain during year 1969 would have one believe it rained every day in Hilo, port city of the "Big Island" of Hawaii in the 50th State, Gene Wilhelm, district manager of the Hawaii Visitors Bureau, said it's not true.

"We'll admit that Hilo has rain, but much of its is not a day-time rain," Wilhelm said, pointing out that visitors were treated to 244 days without rain, but much of it is not a a.m. and 5 p.m.

"This is the time for most sight-seeing and picture-taking," Wilhelm said.

He also noted that several of the remaining 121 days of 1969 recorded only traces of rain during the daytime.

EVERY SPRING the only official stagecoach in West Germany resumes its runs between Bad Kissingen, Schloss Aschback and Bad Bocklet in northwest Bavaria. Drawn by two dapple-gray horses, it is a relic of times when visitors from far away came to cure their ills in Bad Kissingen's famous mud and brine baths. Today it is a prime attraction for tourists, both Germans and foreigners.

The Unmanageable Mister Mailer

By DON KEOWN

MANAGING MAILER by Joe Flaherty; Coward-McCann, 222 pages, $5.95.

There is a desperate need in American government today for fresh blood — not just for new faces, but for original, unorthodox thinking.

The tired hacks from among whom we choose our officials, with their shopworn, threadbare cliche ideas, are largely responsible for the crisis in confidence that confronts government at all levels.

Especially alienated are the young who have lost all patience with politicians who seem to learn nothing from past mistakes, but repeat old errors endlessly.

Newcomers to the campaigns are generally carbon copies of their predecessors, patterning speeches and programs after those that have come before them and have already failed.

Occasionally, however, some one showing promise of originality and a new approach to our old and chronic problems bobs up in the political puddles.

Such occurred in New York City's mayoralty contest of 1969 when the unlikely, unconforming, freewheeling pair of novelist Norman Mailer and columnist Jimmy Breslin decided to run as a team for mayor and city council president respectively in a field they regarded as too mediocre to offer any hope for solutions to the monstrous difficulties afflicting the nation's largest metropolitan colossus.

Joe Flaherty, who took a leave of absence as a reporter for the flamboyant and liberal weekly Village Voice to serve as campaign manager, has bared the hectic story of the effort to elect Mailer and Breslin in his "Managing Mailer."

It is a funny book in part, and a hopeful book at times. But on the whole, it is a sad book, a story of largely wasted effort and another missed opportunity.

For, as is the case so often with these infrequent nonconformist candidates, Mailer and Breslin proved their own worst enemies, rivaled only by their advisers.

To begin with, the book title, "Managing Mailer," is a misnomer. For Norman Mailer proved unmanageable. And Breslin was equally undisciplined. The two were more eccentric in their behavior than they were original in their thinking.

Throughout the campaign, they behaved generally like two swaggering, self-conscious little boys relying upon shocking conduct and the public use of four-letter words to prove their masculinity and hipness. Instead, more often, they came across as vulgar, blustering and immature, so that it was not surprising that New Yorkers, in the end, rejected them overwhelmingly.

At that, Mailer came up with just about the only really fresh ideas heard during a lacklustre campaign — separate statehood for New York City, and greater autonomous power for its neighborhoods. Unfortunately, he was incapable of fleshing out these platform planks convincingly as to how they were to be realized and as to how they would function. For a major literary figure of talent and flair, he proved surprisingly inept in communicating his thinking to the voters.

Writes Flaherty: "Mailer was willing to submerge himself in the political role to a point, but he demanded that one keep both eyes open so that the literary figure, the celebrity, also be kept in focus. This duality kept him from learning the ancient political art of dealing with people."

As for Breslin: "He saw the campaign as a brief and witty exercise to discredit the regular pols, then an exit before the real campaign began."

Thus these two unstable, unpredictable individualists stuttered, stumbled and swore their way through a campaign that often turned their rallies to shambles. The campaign went sour, partially because the candidates did not measure up to the uphill task before them, and partially because of the childish dissension and utter confusion among their temperamental advisers. Flaherty lost all control over a campaign which, he admits, he was not qualified to direct in the first place.

Despite some disenchantment, Flaherty still seems to have emerged from the debacle with a most unrealistic appraisal of his candidate.

CANDIDATE Norman Mailer, right, and his manager, Joe Flaherty, are seen on the campaign trail in the former's chaotic bid for the Democratic nomination for mayor of New York City. "We forgot an old lesson: Most men take their politics very lightly and their politicians very seriously," says Flaherty of the 1969 debacle that ended in overwhelming defeat in his book "Managing Mailer." Coward-McCann is the publisher.

To him, Mailer remained a man of "awesome compassion" and a "social visionary" who towered above mere politicians.

But to the reader, Mailer's compassion is an erratic quality, fanatically present at times, totally lacking at others. And his social vision is a foggy one.

Alongside such consistently compassionate and visionary Americans as William O. Douglas, Eleanor Roosevelt and Martin Luther King, Mailer's inadequacies and inconsistencies are dismaying. (But then look at how American society has treated its Douglases, its Roosevelts, its Kings.)

The quality that most handicapped Mailer — and Breslin as well — was their immaturity, as demonstrated by their insistent and needless use of obscenities from the public platform, like small boys chalking dirty words upon toilet walls, endeavoring to prove their manliness. Or by the affection they shared for the Mafia, in itself a worse obscenity than any four-letter word.

Flaherty tries to salvage some hope and dignity from the campaign with the claim that it produced ideas that will survive and will be realized. But it must also have produced great disillusionment and discouragement among the young who hooked their hopes to Norman Mailer's star.

It is, then, not enough simply to bring new, non-conforming candidates into the political arena. It is necessary to find candidates who not only differ, but who can enunciate and execute their programs, and who can be elected to the offices that must serve as their springboards.

Unfortunately, the anti-establishment candidates that have appeared to date, largely from the New Left, have been egocentrics who have inspired no confidence outside their own immediate circle. Far Right fanatics have neither fared nor deserved to fare any better.

The Mailer-Breslin ticket for one brief instant seemed to promise something better. Unfortunately, the candidates chose to disport themselves as clowns and buffoons. New Yorkers accepted them accordingly. And they polled but 5 per cent of the vote.

So "Managing Mailer" is both an amusing book and a disheartening one. Give Flaherty full credit for pulling no punches. In fact, at times he seems almost cruelly candid in dealing with personalities. But fault him, too, with failing to comprehend the fullness of the disaster when one golden opportunity to help fill the aching leadership void that now plagues our country was fumbled by candidates who chose an ego trip instead of a crusade, and by their inept, jealous, bickering, self-centered campaign leaders who wasted the efforts and dedication of young volunteers and gave them yet another reason to doubt that the American system will any longer work.

MARGARET Patterson Doss' features guiding residents and visitors on walking tour of San Francisco and Bay Area sights have been among the best things in the region's journalism for some time.

In her own inimitable manner, Mrs. Doss leads you to all that is fascinating and intriguing in this 1,000-acre greenbelt that is among the great urban parks of the world. Even if you are not now planning such a visit, a reading of the Doss book will soon have you doing so.

Sleuths & Suspense

NEVER ASK A POLICEMAN by D. J. Olivy; Coward-McCann, 189 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

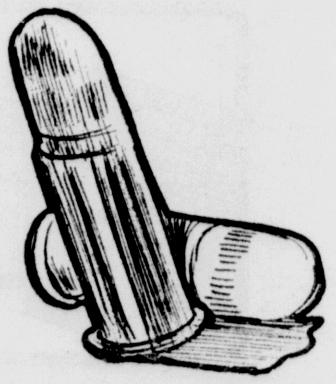

With this excellent first novel, a young woman writer becomes the first recipient of the Charlotte Armstrong Award established to encourage gifted authors in the suspense-mystery field in which the late Miss Armstrong enjoyed such success.

Actually, however, Miss Olivy's work is more reminiscent of John Creasey than of Charlotte Armstrong — strong on police procedure, meshing the personal and professional problems of her detectives, emphasizing character.

Her Acting Supt. Ken Hollis, however, is a more dour character than either Creasey's Roger West or George Gideon.

Hollis has lost his own teen-age daughter through a tragedy. Now he finds himself emotionally involved in a case in which another teen-age girl has died. It becomes absolutely necessary to him that he determine the true facts of her death — was she a blackmailer and killer, or was she a victim? All this while Hollis and his wife try to restore some semblance of domesticity to their shattered home life.

The author, Scotland-born with a freelance journalist and continental United Nations background, now living in London and working for the British Broadcasting Corp., has not yet quite perfected her style, and her plot is perhaps a bit too complicated. But it is a most promising start, and her award is well deserved.

A Novel Lacking In Depth

CALICO PALACE by Gwen Bristow; Crowell, 589 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

It may rile the Women's Liberation Front, but this story of San Francisco in the Gold Rush era has to be categorized as a woman's novel.

It also falls into the category of an historical novel, loaded with details of life in San Francisco, just before and during the rush for gold.

Unfortunately, it fails as a story, lacking in depth and filled with cardboard characters and improbable turns of events.

One gets the feeling that all the research that went into the book might better have been fashioned into a work of nonfiction.

The trials and tribulations of the heroine, Kendra, an eastern girl thrust into wilds of California, smacks of soap opera.

The liveliest character is Marny, an attractive wench, who operates the Calico Palace, a gambling establishment started in the gold mining area and later shifted to San Francisco.

As for the plot, when Marny is saved from being shot by her pet cat, it's credibility, stretched throughout, is snapped.

Fiction Treatment For Pueblo Crisis

CODE OF CONFLICT by Elliott Arnold; Charles Scribner's Sons, 165 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Charles Yoakum.

When, several years ago, Elliott Arnold gives us "Broken Arrow" — a novel which sold well, then mushroomed into a motion picture and eventually a somewhat butchered television series — he established himself as a prominent writer of Indians and the western frontier.

He offered a radical change of pace in 1967 when his "A Night of Watching" became a nation-wide best-seller and he began building a reputation as a fine suspense writer. He cements that reputation in the fast-moving "Code of Conflict."

This newest effort deals with the controversial Pueblo affair, offering fictionally a new and offbeat answer to the question so many people have answered about the spy ship's capture: Why was it captured so effortlessly?

The book may leave a little to be desired for the reader who likes to delve deep into the personalities of the characters. Arnold's effort moves so swiftly to its climatic conclusion that he doesn't feel the necessity to psychoanalyze his participants. There are no flashbacks into the past to show character development. But the book doesn't need it.

Owen Quade, on the surface a lawyer and underneath a U.S. intelligence officer, comes with his wife to Switzerland for a vacation but finds instead the terror of an unexpected entrapment. No James Bond hero here. Quade reacts sometimes with the experience one would expect of an intelligence officer and other times with amateurism and the anger of a man worried about his threatened wife.

All in all it's a fine spy novel.

The Creative Producer Myth De-Bunked

SELZNICK by Bob Thomas; Doubleday, 381 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Norm Howard.

When "Gone With The Wind" was first released in 1939, it had been preceded by one of the most carefully charted publicity campaigns experienced in Hollywood, before or after.

The novel on which it was based had captured the imagination of Americans as have few other works. One of the stars, Clark Gable, was at the peak of his drawing power at the box office. The picture was intended as the chef d'oeuvre of a young producer who had promised his dying father that the family name would be restored to its former prominence in Hollywood.

Now, with each re-release, it reaches ever larger audiences and generates new flurries of critical comment.

But the film is beginning to show its age. The three negatives used in the original Technicolor process no longer register perfectly—producing unpleasant color fringes on the screen. The recording of Max Steiner's score (itself having achieved the status of a cliche) is, by today's standards, muddy and indistinct. The performances are mannered, in the fashion of 1939.

The reputation of "Gone With The Wind" as a film classic rests, finally, on the mythic nature of its Civil War stereotypes. (Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" is still going strong after more than half a century.)

Bob Thomas has fashioned a straight-forward biography of GWTW's producer, David O. Selznick. It is the final volume in a triology of Hollywood biographies — the first two being those of Irving Thalberg and Harry Cohn.

According to Thomas, GWTW was the pinnacle of Selznick's career. He was to spend the rest of his life trying and failing to top himself. Along the way parental philandering, sibiling rivalry and exciting chicanery all figured prominently.

Selznick considered himself a "creative producer." He believed that the producer had some specific artistic contribution to make during the production of a motion picture. Halfway through this book we begin to get an inkling of the nature of this artistic contribution that only the producer can make; it is, put bluntly, money.

It is, in fact, hard to avoid the conclusion that money was Selznick's major contribution to all of his pictures. We are given numerous examples of occasions when Selznick mucked about in matters about which he was less than expert; he re-wrote scripts by the most illustrious writers of the time; he strode onto sets and countermanded the orders of high-priced directors; he altered casting to fulfill whims or personal obligations. In fact, even his most inspired bit of casting — that of Clark Gable as Rhett Butler — was in response to public demand rather than to any imperative he felt as a creative producer. His best work often seems to have been other people's.

Ultimately, his reputation for interfering with production made it difficult for him to find directors in spite of his equanimity in budget matters.

Intentionally or not, Thomas has done much to de-bunk the idea of the creative producer and to re-inforce the notion of film as primarily a director's medium. Still, Selznick's name is inextricably linked with a film landmark and he cannot be deprived of responsibility for it.

The book has all the appropriate photographs, appendices and it is indexed — all in all, a welcome addition to any shelf devoted to the history of the most popular of the arts.

Time once said that the master negative of "Gone With The Wind" was the most valuable object of its weight in the world. In this age of lighter negatives and weightier grosses, that may no longer be true. But it's a tribute that would have justified Selznick to his father. And that, according to Bob Thomas, is what David O. Selznick's life was all about.

Botanical Guide Is Updated

MARIN FLORA by John Thomas Howell; University of California Press, 363 pages, $10. Reviewed by Don Keown.

To his authoritative regional manual of flowering plants and ferns, published originally in 1949, John Thomas Howell, curator of botany emeritus at the California Academy of Science, has added in this new edition a supplement incorporating information developed in the past two decades.

Covering 1,612 species, subspecies and varieties of plants along with a wealth of general information on the geography and flora of our county, Howell's book has long been accepted by botanists, professional and amateur alike, as THE source and starting point for any study of Marin's plant life.

The new data makes the book more than ever invaluable to serious students of Marin nature.

No field guide this, for the casually interested observer, to be pocketed and carried along on hikes. It is a weighty, scholarly, comprehensive tome. And its updating is a definite contribution by Howell and the University of California to an awareness of the richness of Marin nature and to efforts by conservationists for its preservation.

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

Edith Thacher Hurd, the very busy Marin author of stories for children, has two more Harper-published books out this month.

With her husband Clement Hurd as her illustrator, she has done "Johnny Lion's Bad Day" ($2.50) for the I-Can-Read-Book series.

It marks a return of the young hero of "Johnny Lion's Book." Like many a youngster, Johnny must go to bed with a bad cold. Things seem dreary at first. But Father Lion's story, Mother Lion's song and a good dream brighten what started as a bad day. Clement Hurd's illustrations are softly done three-color pictures fitting the gentle mood of the story.

Tony Chen is the illustrator for Mrs. Hurd's "The White Horse" ($3.50) that explores one lad's imaginative thinking that permits him to break a pattern of loneliness. The principal character is a small Chinese boy unhappy in his new big city school. A trip to the zoo starts him on the road to happiness. Strong, realistic pictures despite the fantasy aspect of the story.

Both books are for ages 4 through 8.

Other new books for the juniors:

"Ed Emberley's Drawing Book of Animals" (Little, Brown, $2.95) is a fun book as well as instruction for youngsters with interests in art and animals. Caldecott Award-winner Emberley provides some tips on how a few simple shapes and letters can be expanded into the likenesses of such creatures as a bulldog with bone, an elephant, an alligator and even a green dragon. Clever, and certain to provide a lot of diversion for many boys and girls.

"The Great Indian Tribes" (Hammond, $3.50) by Daniel Jacobson is a serious, well-researched summarization of the history of 25 tribes from the red race. It comes at a time when historians and the public are rediscovering the Indian, minus much of the myths of the past. Unfortunately, the two-columns-to-a-page format and the long paragraphs give this sound book a "school text" appearance, but this is relieved somewhat by Don Spaulding's colorful and authentic illustrations, depicting the various tribesmen and their living and cultural habits.

The baseball season is in full swing and thus the latest adventure and action book for boys by prolific Scott Corbett, "The Baseball Bargain" (Little, Brown, $3.95) is timely. It is a lively, funny yarn in the popular Corbett style about one lad whose intense interest in the national game almost lands him in bad trouble. Naturally, all ends happily. Boys who ordinarily shy away from books often enjoy Scott Corbett.

"The Wrong Side of the Bed" (Doubleday, $3.50) is a meaningful little tale by the veteran Edward Ardizzone about a lad who one morning arises in a bad temper that gets him into difficulties, but discovers his own means of shaking off that foul mood. What is different about it is that Ardizzone tells his story entirely in pictures — without words. And he makes his point quite well.

"Digging for China" (Doubleday, $3.50) by Richard Wilbur is a small book that acts out the fantasy of many children — that if they just dig deep enough, they'll find China. Poetry by Pultizer Prize and National Book Award-winner Wilbur and color-filled illustrations by Newberry Medal-winner William Pene du Bois. As expected, this very accomplished team has come up with a rich, imaginative book that captures splendidly the creativity of the young mind not yet penned in by harsh reality.

"Steve Bellamy" (Little, Brown, $4.50) by W. E. Butterworth is the story of a young New Englander who must adjust to a new way-of-life in Alabama with a father he has never known. Butterworth makes the struggle, and the local color, interesting, according his junior readers the respect of a mature plot and credible characters.

"Olly's Polliwogs" (Doubleday, $3.95) by Anne and Harlow Rockwell focuses upon one of nature's smallest creatures, but one that undergoes a particularly fascinating series of changes in its life cycle. Young Olly sets up a home aquarium featuring frog eggs, and then follows the tadpoles that emerge into adult "froghood." In so doing, he learns a valuable conservation lesson. The artwork is quite simple, and the book is a pleasing and effective one.

THE WORK OF Faye Bennett of Mill Valley is currently on display at the Torrance Galleries, San Anselmo, and will remain there through June 12. The painter studied art at College of Pacific in Stockton, College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland and the San Francisco Academy of Art, and under Barbara Briggs, Elsie Pomeroy and Lucienne Bloch. While oil is her principal medium, she also works in ink and acrylic. Her paintings range from tiny miniatures to large canvases.

On The Stereo Scene--Tapes, Albums, Singles

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

The generation of women who were captivated by Elvis Presley and the men who liked to dance to the music of Bill Haley and His Comets now have the chance to relive those days.

A group of "old timers" got together for a live performance at Madison Square Garden late in November and their session was recorded as "1950's Rock & Roll Revival" (Kama Sutra KSBS 2015), now available in a limited edition.

Bill Haley opens with his "Rock Around the Clock." Among those who follow Haley are The Penguins with "Earth Angel," Shep & The Limelites with "Daddy's Home" and "There's a Moon Out Tonight" by The Capris.

Those who turned up their nose at the old rock 'n' roll probably will consider this music mild today.

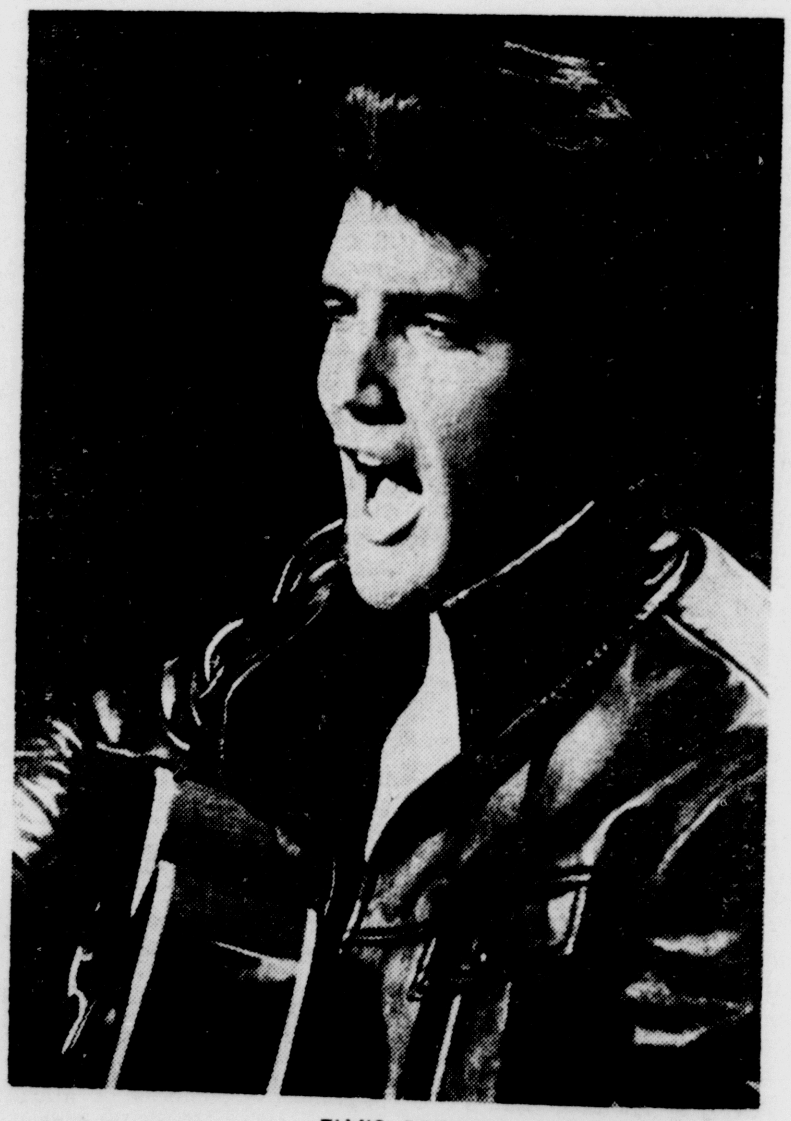

Another good album retracing the movement of this music and in which its fans should be interested is "The Core of Rock" (MGM SE-466), which features Richie Havens, Tim Hardin, Janis Ian, The Bules Project, The Enemies and Van Dyck Parks. Havens' "Just Like a Woman" is an outstanding number.

Rock music is further updated by the soundtrack of "Zabriskie Point" (MGM SE-4668ST), which features The Grateful Dead, The Kaleidoscope, The Pink Floyd and The Youngbloods and Patti Page's "Tennessee Waltz."

The Pink Floyd open with "Heart Beat, Pig Meat" and close with "Come In Number 52, Your Time Is Up."

SELECTED SINGLES — "Grover Henson Feels Forgotten" by Bill Cosby (Uni 55223), "Stormy" by Billy Eckstine (Enterprise ENA-9009, "What I'm Saying Is True" by Steam (Mercury 75053), "Take Your Own Sweet Time" by Jeffrey Comanor (A&M 1179), "What's Gonna Happen to Me" by Charlie Hodges (Calla C-170).

TAP DECK — EIGHT-TRACK Cartridge. "Joy" (RCA Victor O8S-1045). The original cast recording of the musical starring Oscar Brown, Jr., Jean Pace and Sivuca is a good change of pace cartridge, especially for those who use a home module. Open-reel: "Time Out for Smokey Robinson and The Miracles" (Tamal X 295), an Ampex tape release, is a good session with a sharp quartet. Songs include "Abraham, Martin and John," "Wichita Lineman," "Here I Go Again" and eight others. Cassette of the Week: "Somehow, Some Way" by Glen Yarbrough (Warner Bros. X1782), an Ampex tape release.

THE PRISON DOC

New 'Home' Failed To Please Women

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles by Dr. Leo L. Stanley, long-time surgeon at San Quentin Prison and author of "My Most Unforgettable Convicts," recalling people and events of earlier days at the state prison.)

By DR. LEO L. STANLEY

"Please, let me in. I'm almost frozen to death. I'll never try to run away again. Please."

That was the plea a sleepy-eyed guard heard as he answered the outside bell at the Women's Prison at Tehachapi and saw before him a cold, shivering, bedraggled girl in prison garb. The escapee was no other than Hazel Hackett, a 20-year-old inmate who had, during the night, left her soft warm bed at the institution, climbed over a high Cyclone fence and wended her way eastward toward the nearest railway station in the hope that she might "get away from it all." Her absence was not detected.

Prison officials stood wide-eyed in amazement at seeing this girl, whom they had supposed was snugly tucked away in her room, come back to the gate at the height of a snow storm, seeking to be taken in again.

THE CLUB WOMEN of California, for many years, thought that there should be a separate prison for the women convicted of felonies.

Both men and women had been confined at San Quentin since the days when the brig Euphemia was towed away from San Francisco and anchored off the shores of Punta Quentin as a prison ship. The women's quarters were always overcrowded. There was no recreational areas. And the small cells were cheerless and confining. Under such circumstances disturbances were frequent.

And there could be little thought of returning these women back to society with the hope that they would go straight.

LEGISLATORS has agreed that there should be a separate prison for them.

In 1934 a Women's Prison was established high up in the Tehachapi Mountains, far removed from any city and about 10 miles from the nearest railway.

This institution had been planned as a model institution for women. Much thought had been given to the project. Many institutions from which it might take the best features were studied. Women prison officials travelled all over the United States to visit prisons which had been most highly recommended.

NO EXPENSE was spared by the planners and the architects to make this the last word.

There were to be no walls nor fences, nor other obvious restraints. No guard towers were to be constructed about the periphery.

"The women will just love this beautiful place and they will have no desire to leave. We expect them to go in for vegetable gardening. They may even want to plant grain, corn, and potatoes. And they can take care of chickens, and even livestock." These were some of the statements of the women civic leaders who envisioned this model establishment.

A BOARD consisting principally of women was entrusted with the planning and the administration of the institution.

Some of these women had the most unusual and astonishing ideas about the conduct of a prison, the treatment of the women and the improvement of the penal system.

From a distance the institution looked like a Long Island millionaire's estate, or a very fashionable country club. The taxpayers' money was not spared to make this beautiful mountain resort an ideal spot. Much money was spent in landscaping. A woman expert was hired to choose the right shrubs and ornamental trees to give it just the right appearance.

BUT WHEN IT was completed, and the women moved in from San Quentin, the female inmates were not much impressed with all this effort toward their welfare.

Few of them had ever lived in the country. They longed for the cramped and dingy apartments they had been accustomed to in the crowded cities. And away out here in the wilds there were no men to look at — except a couple of guards and a maintainance man. At San Quentin they could, at least, look through their barred windows out into the yard and see hundreds of men, although they were not permitted to get within a stone's throw of them.

So getting away from "this place" was forever foremost in the minds of many of the gun molls, shop-lifters, burglars, embezzlers, abortionists and murderesses.

IN ORDER TO prevent an unwelcome exit by some of the girls a concession was made by the female planners of the institution that a woven wire fence should be erected about the immediate buildings, but that it should be entirely concealed by shrubbery so as not to offend the sensitivities of the inmates.

One guard who lived at the Farm House about a mile removed, was provided with a saddle horse. It was his duty to mount his animal at unexpected and unpredicted times of the day, ride slowly over the wide acreage, climb to the hill tops which surrounded the great domain and, while there, do a little target practice with his rifle slung over his shoulder or with the pistol quickly drawn from his holster. This worked very well.

It was discontinued after months because the fractious horse threw his rider, almost killing him on the huge boulders. There was no proviso in the budget for another horse, and, in fact, no guard could be hired who wished to risk his neck on any animal.

BY THIS TIME however, the matrons of the institution had it pretty well indoctrinated into their charges that there was great danger and peril in the mountains, that wild animals, cougars and even bears, were known to inhabit the country side and might attack any helpless human being. And rattlesnakes were in abundance and coiled up to strike. These stories proved to be a very good deterrant.

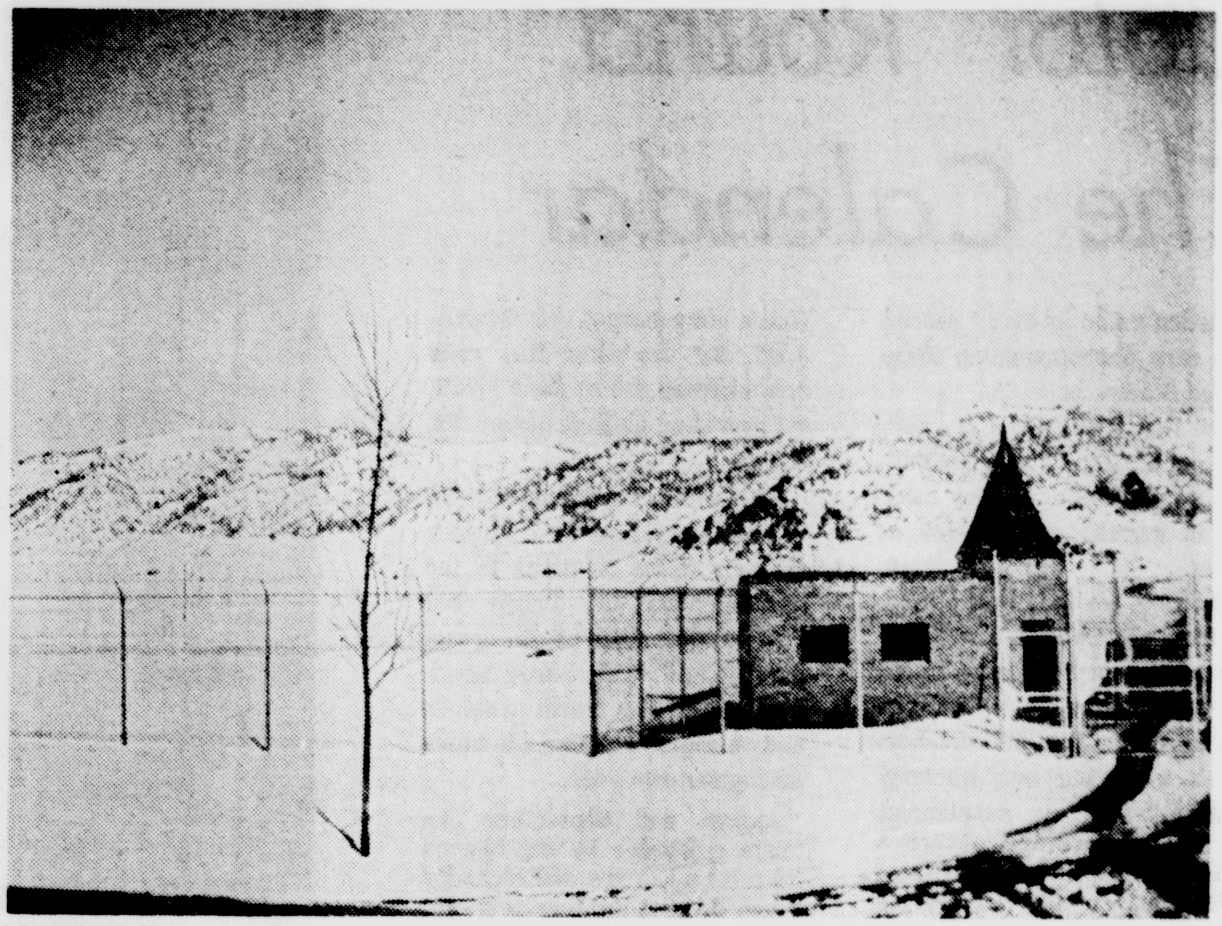

But among some of those souls confined in the women's prison there were a few who were not afraid of firearms, rattlesnakes, or ever bears. One such was Hazel Hackett who, although not more than 20 years of age, had spent most of her life in homes for delinquents, county jails, houses of correction and finally the penitentiary.

Hazel was anxious to get back to her city haunts where there were men, excitement, dancing, an occasional brawl or robbery and other similar entertainment. Tehachapi with all its mountain beauty and baronial buildings had no appeal at all for her. In winter snow falls heavily on the peaks and even on the valley floor it may cover the ground for weeks.

THE URGE FOR the bright lights of the city was so great for Hazel that one night, when all was quiet, she stole from her warm bed and wended her way across the snowy meadow. As she proceeded she became colder and colder. Her absence was not noticed at the institution. The icy blasts from the mountain peaks chilled her to the bone. Her feet became heavy and her limbs would scarcely carry her through the snow drifts.

Her determination to escape the jail was great. But as the coldness increased — the lure for the great outside likewise chilled.

By early morning she had had enough of the floundering in the snow without making notable progress. Wearily she turned back toward the glow of the great flood lights which illuminated the institution.

CALIFORNIA'S new state prison for women in the Tehachapi Mountains was planned as a model institution. But the inmates transferred from overcrowded San Quentin did not appreciate the place, particularly their isolation and the heavy snows that fell in winter. This snapshot from the Leo L. Stanley collection shows the prison's Gate House.

A HEAVY SNOWFALL such as this one discouraged and punished 20-year-old Hazel Hackett when she fled from the Tehachapi prison and caused her to return to its warm buildings. The picture was taken in front of the Farm House a mile from the prison proper, where a mounted guard was stationed.

Color 'Round The Calendar

You find it only in a few sections of the country — but happily it is possible to enjoy color the 12 months of the year in Marin.

By using the following checklist from the California Association of Nurserymen as a guide you can have color in your garden from January to December. Check with your own nurseryman, however, to supplement the list with our area favorites and to compensate for our local differences in the months of bloom.

CAMELLIAS have started their color show in January; azaleas take up the color standard, yielding to raphiolepis (India hawthorne) in March-April. By the time May rolls around roses are at their loveliest providing elegant blooms for cutting.

As summer approaches gardenias are adding the fragrance of their white blossoms to the garden; and the bright red blooms of bottle brush are a July delight. This hardy specimen loves the warm weather and blooms several times throughout the year.

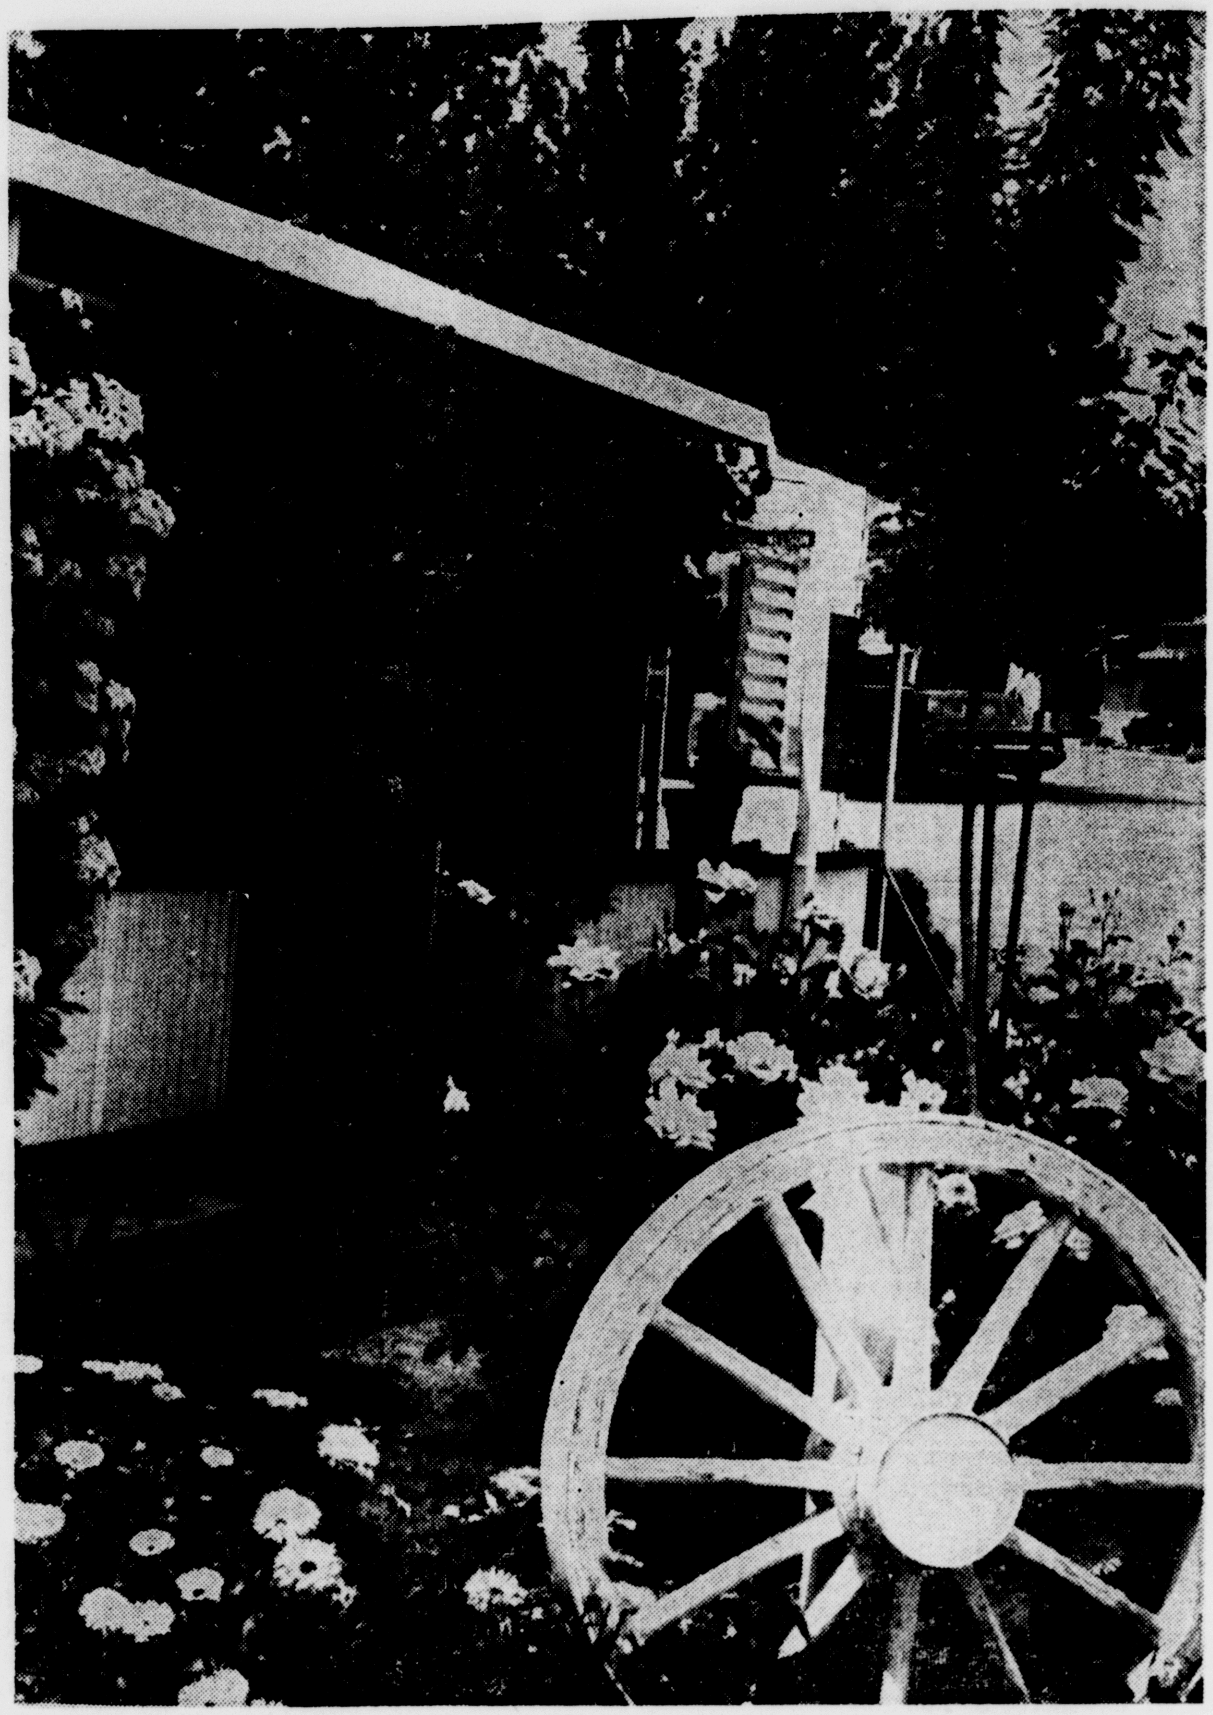

August and September are made enjoyable by the blooms from hibiscus and oleander which are hot weather performers. Bougainvillea and crape myrtle are also late summer choices — each creates a neighborhood attraction at this time of year.

AS FALL ROLLS around, bird of paradise is starting to show its first color and the bloom period extends for many additional months past October. The chrysanthemums begin to flower, and the home gardener can feel the crispness of fall in the air.

In November and December, the red berries of pyracantha and holly provide spectacular garden color. The earlier-blooming Sasanqua camellias start to bloom — and the color calendar has gone full cycle.

CALIFORNIANS ARE able to enjoy garden color 12 months of the year — to the envy of out-of-staters. And we rely heavily upon roses to create a carnival of color from spring until early winter. Pictured is a May garden scene surrounding a mobile home. Note the attention-winning pillar rose, at left, and the blaze of color bush roses provide in a bed unto themselves. Adding to the color pallette is a purple flowering plum while a bed of bright yellow calendulas brightens the foreground. (Photo courtesy of California Association of Nurserymen)

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✓Hanging baskets should be brought down occasionally for a good soaking. Immerse the whole container in water and let it drink deeply.

✓Set lawn mower blades to cut grass longer than during the cooler months. About one and a half inches is right for the warm summer months.

✓In pruning hedges give them a slight pyramidal shape posed to plenty of sunlight. This keeps the hedge full and green.

✓Plant hibiscus now for bloom through the summer. Give them lots of sun and room to grow. The varieties and color opportunities are indescribable.

✓Anticipate summer bare spots in the garden by filling-in now with annuals such as marigolds, zinnias, dwarf dahlias, petunias—or at least a dozen so that the lower leaves are exothers that nurseries now have in stock.

✓It is still not too late for another planting of gladiolus bulbs for autumn bloom.

Getting The House Ready For Painting

By ANDY LANG

It is a rare house indeed which doesn't require a certain amount of surface attention before it is given a coat of exterior paint.

If this preparatory work is neglected, the entire job suffers —even though the result of this omission may not be visibly apparent for several months. In many cases, preparing the outside of a house for a new coat of paint takes more time than the painting itself. But it is well worth the trouble if you want the house to present as neat an appearance a year later as it does immediately after the task of painting has been completed.

IT SHOULD be understood that most peeling and chipping paint is caused by the entrance of moisture underneath the paint film. Thus, no matter how well you prepare the surface for the new paint, the same condition ultimately will reoccur unless the condition is corrected. While most latex paints permit water vapor to escape without disturbing the paint film, this does not prevent the old paint from continuing to peel and disturbing the new coat.

Most of us know that scraping, sanding, wire-brushing and steel wooling are necessary to remove loose and scaling paint. And if we make the decision to prepare the surface, we usually know how to go about it. But we often skip the little things that can cause trouble, notably the closing of gaps that permit rainwater to enter. A check should be made around butt joints, doors, windows, utility inlets and exhaust pipes. All loose caulking should be removed and replaced. Steel-wool or wire-brush away all rust. Replace loose nails or countersink them and fill the holes with putty. Fill all cracks in masonry with patching cement or caulking compound.

If your house has wood shakes and shingles, they can be protected with shingle stain or with specially formulated shake and shingle paints. When painting clapboard siding, be sure to apply a generous coating of paint along the bottom edges. Skipping the edges or not applying enough paint to them permits moisture to move up under the paint film. Masonry or other materials containing cement should not be painted with an oil paint; use an exterior latex designed for use on masonry.

TRIM AROUND doors and windows usually should be covered with a trim paint, which has a gloss or semi-gloss appearance and is especially resistant to weather. But regular house paint is satisfactory if you want a duller finish.

Since the principal cost of painting a house is the labor—and since it is your own labor that is involved—get a good quality paint. Saving a couple of dollars a gallon on the paint is poor economy if it fails to do the job properly.

Drab Portal Got You Down? Screen, Benches Offer Cure

Many home owners are discouraged with plain, drab front entries, bleakly open to the street. Their lawns are scarred with shortcut trails, and shrubs are trampled by children and dogs bee-lining for the doorway. But never fear: the cure is here.

The common concrete slab and dinky overhang can be transformed into an attractive entry that guides callers to the door. It's as simple as constructing a divider screen and installing benches or planters to point the way.

Possibilities for screen design are unlimited. A basic framework can be made by attaching a four by four inch western wood post to the overhang at the edge of the slab and connecting it to the wall beside the doorway.

A SIMPLE screening of two-by-two inch lumber, evenly spaced, allows air and light to penetrate but defines and shields the doorway. A louvered screen is attractive, but is more complicated to construct.

Where a shield against weather is desirable, a solid screen of butted boards is a good choice.

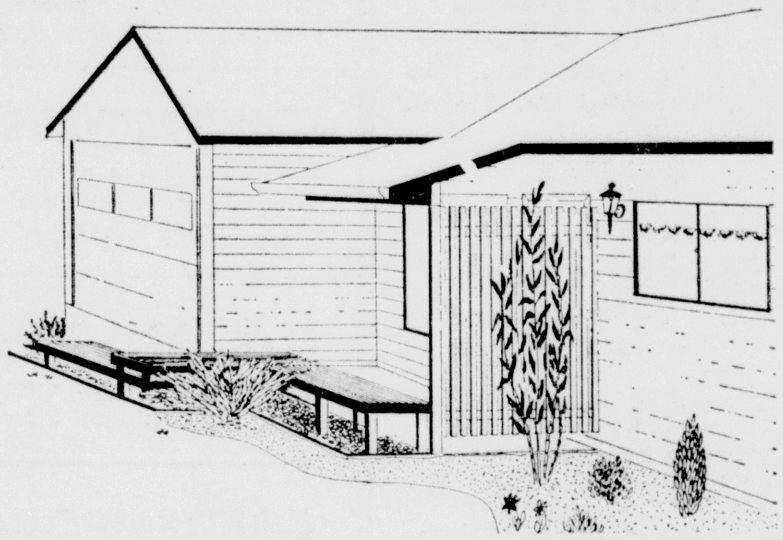

Some entries look well dressed up with more intricate designs, using boards of varying width set in a pattern, or more widely spaced uprights with a design of panel insets.

THE PRIVACY screen is a good backdrop for shrubs and vines, which it protects by redirecting foot traffic.

A series of low benches or planter boxes extending from the screen to the path or driveway guides callers to the door and saves the lawn from wear and tear.

These, too, may be built of western lumber and set on a bed of fine gravel. Sturdy yet attractive bench seats may be made of two-by-four inch lumber, set on edge and slightly spaced.

Height of the benches may be varied for added interest.

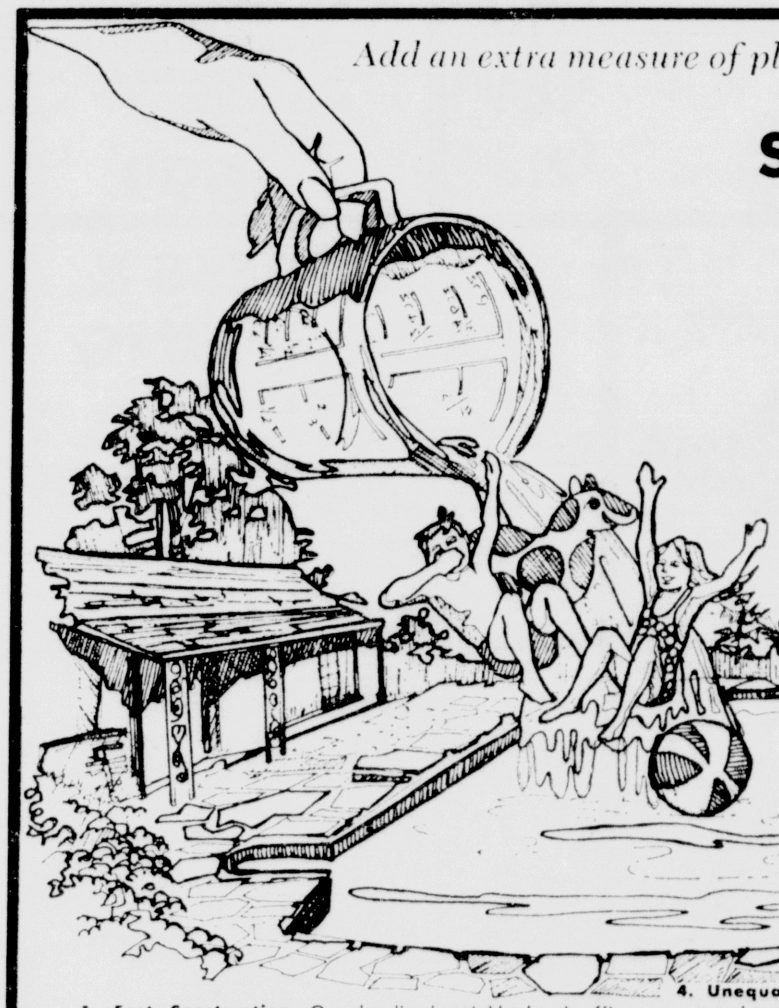

A PLAIN entry becomes distinctive through the simple addition of privacy shield and benches, which point to entry, protect the yard from foot traffic and beautify as well. The screen is made of two-by-two-inch western lumber attached to two-by-four horizontals. Benches are two-by-fours on edge, spaced for drainage.

Nanny Comes From A Theatrical Family

Juliet Mills, playing a British nanny in the new ABC situation comedy series, "Nanny and the Professor," is a member of that famous English acting family headed by father John Mills and including sister Hayley Mills. And the wife-mother writes books and film scripts.

KQED Films Are Honored

Two films produced by KQED (Channel 9) have been awarded Golden Eagle Certificates by the Council on International Non-theatrical Events which indicates their suitability for international film festival use.

They are "Ascent," a film on rock-climbing in Yosemite, and "Act Now," a documentary on the training program of the American Conservatory Theater.

CINE, set up in 1957, is a non-profit organization representing a cross-section of non-theatrical film and television leaders.

Marin Poets' Corner

URBAN SPRAWL

Not so long ago,
In the valley
Of heart's delight,
There were the
Boulevards, rows of trees,
Walks and pleasant things,
Fiesta De Rosa,
And yonder,
Orchards and blossoms,
May Day celebrated
In the hills,
All the Bay Area
Did attend;
Now jets trail
Smoke across the sky,
Noise and acid smells,
Urban sprawl,
Freedom,
Without rhyme or reason,
Perhaps, you know
Of the valley
Of which I speak,
And yet you seek
To industrialize;
Power of money,
Power of property,
Life compressed
In space and time:
My sickness,
Age and nostalgia.

POINT REYES — C.B. GEARHART

YESTERDAY AND TOMORROW

Time keeps ringing in my ears
As past experiences jump to haunt me.
The ultimate task lay ahead;
I was a fool
Known now to me also.
There is nothing left
Except tie the knots and
Call it finished.
Deep doubts surface once more
Probably for the last full time
To be seen. In less than,
Three will be memories
Which will come to haunt me
Again thru time.
